Dairy Stakeholders Name Officers

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.)—The Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders board of directors elected Richard Waybright, Gettysburg, as their new president at a recent board meeting held in conjunction with the 2000 Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders conference. At the same meeting, Chuck Cruickshank, Carlisle, was elected vice president; Betty Reibson, Forksville, secretary; and Allyn Lamb, Mechanicsburg, treasurer. The officers were elected to serve one-year terms.

Waybright is co-founder and partner in Mason-Dixon Farms, Inc. where they milk 2,300 cows and farm 2,400 acres. He also serves as president of the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program and is a member of the National UDIA Board that directs the spending of producers' funds for milk promotion.

Chuck Cruickshank is director of procurement, member relations and transportation for Land O'Lakes, Inc. Cruickshank is in charge of procurement for Land O'Lakes Mid-Atlantic region. He also works

Agriculture Makes Headlines For The New Millennium

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — From Y2K to "why two candidates?" to record yields, increased beef demand, excitement over robotic milkers, Pennsylvania Egg Quality Assurance Program perhaps providing a model for a national program, and pork and other commodity organizations rethinking the importance of checkoff programs, the agriculture world continues to change to keep up with this political and information age.

January

The year for the agriculture community opened with the 84th Pennsylvania Farm Show. This event offered six new computerized information booths and more than $260,000 in premiums distributed to about 10,000 winners.

Lancaster Farming's opinion column reported, "The Pennsylvania Farm Show is history and officials are calling it the best ever."

High attendance at the show and Farm Show dinner helped to make it a successful consumer education event.

February

Pennsylvania DHIA and Dairy One entered into an agreement to create an international service company focused on delivering American-style dairy herd management systems around the globe. The interna-

QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — And the recipe for success is... there is no recipe for success. Or trade secrets. Or no-fail product. To achieve the lowest somatic cell count in Lancaster County for the past four years, Gary and Jenny Bowman simply practice careful farm management.

The Bowmans were honored recently at the Lancaster DHIA banquet for their accomplishment, a distinction which has been theirs during their time at Four Leaf Acres.

The couple prefers not to boast about their track record. "We want clean cows, we want to ship quality milk, and we just do the best job we can. We also feel that the Lord has blessed us," said Gary.

of 75 registered cows.

Both have farming backgrounds. Gary grew up farming with his father in Lancaster and Berks counties, and Jenny grew up on a dairy farm in southern Lancaster County.

Helping Make It Work

Part-time help comes from not only neighbor Anthony Johnson, 17, but also the Bow-

We Reflect On The Past, Anticipate The Future

As the year comes to a close, we reflect on the past and anticipate the future. At Lancaster Farming, we extend seasons greetings to all our readers. With this issue you will find our 2001 Ag Directory. This comprehensive, 160-page listing of agricultural organizations and contact people in an eight-state region will be useful all year. Next week, our annual Farm Show issue includes coverage of events for both the Pennsylvania Farm Show and the Keystone Farm Show. Traditional Farm Show weather didn't wait for the beginning of January this year. With the coldest winter since 1989, the cold creek and snow scene above gives warning of what to expect on our trek to the shows in Harrisburg and York. In the photo, the camera looks west from the small bridge on North Weavertown Road between Mascot and Church roads in east central Lancaster County. Happy New Year, everyone! Northeast Broiler Fryer Parts Part I

ATLANTA, GA.

Report Supplied By USDA

Trucklot buying interest was generally fair during midweek trading. Offerings of bone-in breasts were ample and available at sharp discounts.

Boneless-skinless breasts were adequate, and dark meat items were more than sufficient. Wings remained the strongest item and were usually short of full needs. Movement into retail and distributive channels was limited. The market tone was weak on bone-in breasts, fully steady to firm on wings, about steady on the balance.

Delmarva Broiler/Fryer

ATLANTA, GA.

Report Supplied By USDA

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds remained seasonally light and unaggressive, but was sufficient to satisfactorily clear seller offerings. Live supplies were about moderate; weights were in a full range of light to heavy. Processing schedules varied and were moderately heavy in total. Less than truckload asking prices were 1 cent higher at 48 to 62 cents. Trade sentiment was firm. In the parts complex, supplies of bone-in breasts were readily available. Boneless skinless breast were fully adequate. Leg items were fully adequate to ample and wings remained short and wanted.

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO

Report Supplied By USDA

Another day without fresh export sales and carryover fund selling, lent pressure to wheat and soybean bids and limited advances in corn bids. Bitter cold temperatures increased feed demand across the country giving some support to corn. Wheat steady to 3 cents lower. Corn 2 to 4 cents higher. Soybeans 5 to 7 cents lower.

Winterkill concerns still in the picture but recent mild temperatures in winter wheat growing areas have eased fears. Continued lack of foreign interest this week spurred fund selling in wheat and bean pits. Frozen waterways and upcoming delivery dates were also declining factors. Further weakness in soybean bids came from favorable growing weather in South America where widespread rainfall was reported.

EXPORT SALES: PURCHASER COMMODITY TONNAGE DELIVERY DATE Nothing new to report.

THESE MAY NOT BE THE ONLY EXPORT SALES THAT HAVE TRANSPIRED, BUT THEY ARE THE ONLY SALES THAT COULD BE CONFIRMED BY USDA GRAIN MARKET NEWS.

WINDING DOWN

"Partly work and partly play, must ye on St. Distaff's Day," goes the old adage for the day following the Twelve Days of Christmas, though St. Distaff's Day, always January 7 and the day after Epiphany, was when women were supposed to get back to their spinning after the holidays. A distaff is a spindle for holding the flax or wool in spinning, and in the glee of St. Distaff's Day, the men would often playfully prevent their wives from starting their work by trying to burn the flax off the distaff. The distaff has come to symbolize the domestic sphere, hence the term "the distaff side" refers to women.

Yule is come and Yule is gone, and we have feasted well; so Jack must to his flail again, and Jenny to her wheel.

TIP OF THE WEEK

ITALIAN SAUSAGE PASTA

2 tablespoons olive oil
1 pound Italian sausage
1 yellow onion, chopped
4 cloves garlic, minced
1 cup dry white wine (optional)
1/2 cup sun-dried tomatoes
1 tablespoon fresh oregano, or 1 teaspoon dry
1 pound pasta of your choice grated Parmesan, as garnish

Bring water to a boil. Meanwhile, heat olive oil in a skillet. Remove sausage from the casings, crumble into skillet, and brown. Set aside sausage, then brown onion and garlic. Add wine (or water), then the sun-dried tomatoes, drained and chopped. Add sausage and oregano. Cook pasta, then toss with the sauce and top with Parmesan.

Makes 6 servings.

★ ★ New Products Now Available ★ ★

• The Advantages of the Fiberglass Wheels are:

Fiberglass

Wheels

- Very Low Maintenance - These wheels are built to last a lifetime, having no replaceable parts. The only maintenance required is to keep them free of dirt, grease, oil or rubber.
- High Performance - Fiberglass wheels are stronger than steel wheels. They are also lighter, making them easier to handle.
- Wheels stay straight - Fiberglass wheels do not warp or bend like steel wheels. They also do not have rattling spokes - ever!
- Rugged Heavy Duty Design - It takes a major accident or impact to break or twist these wheels.
- Hard Durable Surface - Resists scuffs and scratches, paint, and corrosion.
- Easier Cleaning - Spokes have all rounded corners, no flat areas for dirt to get into.

• The Advantages of the Fiberglass Springs are:

Fiberglass

Springs

- Lightweight - A fiberglass spring weighs 22 lbs. less than a steel spring, 44 lbs. less weight on the carriage.
- Durable One Piece Design - No bolts to give out or wear.
- Better Performance With Heavy Loads - The more weight, the better the ride, and not go flat and bottom out.
- No Rattling Ever - Paint will not blister or peel off. No rust stains running out between the plys, making a place for mold and mildew to grow.
- Lifetime Guarantee - If you are not 100% satisfied, we will replace the spring or wheels at no charge.
- Standard Kits - Now Available - For a smoother ride and less bounce.

Time For New Year's Resolutions

The end of the year of our Lord 2000 is near. What a short time ago, it seems, we were talking about Y2K and all the anticipated problems with computers and their inherent garbage-in, garbage-out limitations. But we got through it. A lot of money was spent and a lot of money made, depending on which side of the program upgrades you were on.

This year, we have the national presidential election to talk about at year's end. But for farmers, not much has changed. We are still concerned about low commodity prices and the environmental restrictions that are an increasing part of the mix needed to stay in the business of farming. The opponents of agriculture now hire private law firms to take ag enterprises to task because they believe government moves too slowly to enforce regulations. You can sometimes spend more time in jail for disrupting the habitat of an "endangered species" than for human murder.

And yet, a little travel to underdeveloped countries to see how they handle food makes those who think scratch their heads in disbelief. Unrefrigerated meats in the market place and vegetables washed in sewer water are the norm. U.S. food safety and environmental standards are extremely superior. We can only hope our agriculture is not forced offshore into those kinds of conditions. Then "what's for dinner" will really be inhuman and unsanitary.

Truly, we live in a wonderful country. At this time when it's normal to make New Year's resolutions, let's resolve to do our part to build up America. It's not perfect. But it is still the best place in the world to live. And agriculture is a big part of the reason we can wish everyone in the nation a prosperous 2001.

To Plan For Profits

As the New Year approaches, tradition has us making New Year's resolutions. One resolution you may want to consider is increasing your business skills.

Most farmers have done an excellent job learning and mastering their production skills and developing and managing enterprise budgets. But most farmers need to develop and enhance their business skills.

These are the executive skills that every business needs to be successful. These skills include strategic planning, human resource management, financial management, and legal and risk management. Profits just do not happen, they need to be planned for. If you do not have a business plan, you should consider developing one.

Your business plan serves as a road map for you to achieve your goals. My vocational agriculture teacher use to say "Plan your work and work your plan." The same is true with your business plan. Also, you might want to consider establishing an advisory committee for your farm. This committee should include key people who may help you in meeting your business goals.

Professions to consider are your accountant, attorney, banker, nutritionist, veterinarian, crop adviser, insurance agent, non-farm business owner, and human resource manager. Another way to develop your business skills is to serve on a board of directors of a nonprofit organization.

Remember, change is inevitable but success is optional. If you do not plan for profits in your business, they probably will not happen.

To Know

Your Competition

To be a competitive farm today you need to know your competition and trends that are occurring in society.

Who is your competition? It is your neighbor, farmers in other parts of the U.S. and the world, business in town, and producers of alternative products to yours. Have you developed benchmark data for your farm? If you have, how does it compare to the industry average? Are you in the top 10 percent? If you are not, how are you going to become a member of the Top 10 Club?

The days of the open market are over where you produce a product and take to market to see who will buy it and at what price. Alliances are being formed between suppliers of inputs, farmers, and marketers. This is being driven by consumers. Thus, it is important to know your customers' customers and your suppliers' suppliers. Also,

Both these terms — "consolation of Israel" and "redemption of Jerusalem" — "implied action by a messiah."

According To The Law

Simeon, Anna, Mary, Joseph, and the infant Jesus were brought together in the temple by the provision in Leviticus 12:1-8, directing that a newborn son was to be circumcised and, 34 days after that, taken to the priest for naming and dedication to the Lord. (A daughter required 66 days).

Unable to afford to sacrifice a lamb, Mary and Joseph were permitted (Lev. 12:8) to offer either two turtledoves or two pigeons.

Because Mary and Joseph were careful to observe the religious traditions, they profited from some unexpected blessings and a prophecy. While it is true that ritual and tradition may become substitutes for faith, we often forget that, when regarded rightly as "earthen vessels," they can also be conduits to authentic spiritual "treasure."

Although chronologically Anna appears after Simeon, we will look at her first because his account is fuller and more significant. All we know of the widowed Anna is that her name means "grace," that she is a prophetess, and was at least 84 years of age. Unlike Simeon, we do not have a record of her words and we know only that she "gave thanks to God, and spoke of him to all who were looking for the redemption of Israel."

'God Has Heard'

Promised by divine inspiration that he would not die until he personally witnessed God's messiah, Simeon was inspired to come to the temple at the precise moment when Jesus was brought there for dedication. By that same inspiration, Simeon you need to study consumer trends, both in purchasing power and the type of products they want. Once you have done your homework, you need to make adjustments to your farm business to meet these changes. This is an ongoing process. The successful farms will be the ones to anticipate change and make the right choices.

Remember, your profits are directly related to your customers' profits. Anything you can do to enhance his profits will help yours.

To Keep Learning

Time management becomes more critical but harder to do each year. If have not already done so, this next year should be the year you manage your time instead of other factors managing it for you. Sit down and set the major priorities or goals you want to achieve for next year. One of those goals should be achieve balance in your life.

If you have not read Stephen Covey's "The 7 Habits of Highly Effective People," you should. Budget time to continue your growth and development through education. Attend professional meetings and management seminars. Develop new skills.

One excellent meeting coming up is the Lancaster Chamber of Commerce Farm Business School Jan. 31 at Leola Family Restaurant. Dr. David Kohl, Virginia Tech, will be conducting a full day workshop on global competition, benchmarking, alliances, establishing advisory committees, and alternative investments. For more details and registration information, contact Brent Landis at the Chamber by calling (717) 397-3531. Remember to take time and invest in yourself.

recognized this humble couple's infant as the fulfillment of that promise.

The name "Simeon" means "the deity has heard." Although there were many by this name, it was particularly appropriate for this devout and patient man. God had heard and now answered his prayer.

Note that Simeon proclaims that Jesus was sent by God, not only for the glory of Israel, but as "a light for revelation to the Gentiles" (2:32). This child would not be just the messiah of Israel, but for the whole world.

Further, Simeon delivers a prophecy which must have chilled Mary's heart. By this child many would be saved or condemned and "a sword will pierce your own soul also" (2:35), a foreshadowing of the cross at Calvary.

Simeon's concluding words, "Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace..." (2:29), are called the Nunc Dimittis from the Latin translation of the first words of this quotation. They have been used as Christian liturgy since at least the 5th Century AD, and possibly even earlier.

The aged Simeon did not have to see the fulfillment of the Kingdom of God. The same faith by which he had waited for the messiah was enough to permit him now to die in God's peace.

And what is your Nunc Dimittis?

Free Enterprise...

Two words that business people around the world take very seriously. Members of the Pennsylvania Livestock Auction Association take free enterprise very seriously too. They realize that producers have a choice when it comes time to buy and sell livestock and they are dedicated to making sure that producers can take advantage of the free enterprise system in the best way possible... at the local auction market.

Pennsylvania livestock markets strive to provide you with the kind of service you deserve as a business person and a friend. You can be assured that the honesty, integrity and solid marketing fundamentals found at your local market will ensure nothing less than the true market value for your livestock.

LANCO Dairy Farmers Co-Op Inc.

1373 Beaver Dam Road, Honey Brook, PA 19344

Mr. Farmer, we have several processors who would like to market more milk. Please call us to check out our programs and prices. We have an excellent quality control program as well as prompt local milk haulers. LANCO is one of the few farmer run and controlled grass roots co-ops on the east coast. Our farmers are real people to us, and are not just a number. We do not discriminate because of your size, all farms receive the same base price and hauling charge. LANCO is an honorable co-op with your farm in mind. We take no equity out and have the lowest deductions in the industry. We are a milk marketing division of Allied Federated Co-Op, Inc. of Canton, New York. Call us today!

We are truly farmers coming and working together!

Young Holstein Breeder Award Applications

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Holstein Association announces it is seeking applications for the Distinguished Young Holstein Breeder Award. The contest is open to any Pennsylvania and National Holstein Association member between the ages of 21-40 (as of Dec. 31, 2000) who owns or has management responsibilities for a herd of cows. The herd must be on official DHIA test.

The award is to recognize accomplishments of young Holstein breeders and to encourage them to establish goals that will aid in their management decisions to help achieve a profitable dairy operation.

The winning entry from Pennsylvania will receive a complimentary room at the 2000 state convention and convention banquet tickets. They will also have their entry sent on for national competition.

Applications for the Distinguished Young Holstein Breeder Award, are available by contacting Pennsylvania Holstein Association, 839 Benner Pike, State College, PA 16801, Phone: (814) 234-0364, (814) 234-1698.

Entry deadline is Jan. 15, 2001.

Plant Yields Secret Of Origins

ITHACA, N.Y. — A weedy, inedible member of the mustard family, related to broccoli and cauliflower, has become the first plant to yield the secrets of its primordial origins.

In a computational research effort at Cornell University, the plant, Arabidopsis thaliana, was shown to contain genetic evidence of its emergence between 50 million and 200 million years ago.

The finding, noted Cornell researchers, will be invaluable to those using Arabidopsis as a genetic model for other plant species, unlocking genes for important traits in agricultural crops such as corn, tomatoes, and wheat.

The researchers report on their discovery in the latest edition of the journal Science (Dec. 15, 2000).

A decade ago, Arabidopsis was widely adopted by plant scientists as an easily manipulated model for other plants because it is simple to grow in the laboratory, has a short life cycle and has a small genome — only about 140 million base pairs of DNA compared with wheat, which might have as many as 16 billion pairs. This year, the entire DNA sequence of the plant was completed, and for the first time researchers were able to understand the sequence of the 25,000 genes necessary for an organism to function as a flowering plant.

Using this genome sequence — which is in the public domain on the Internet — the Cornell researchers used computers to sort through the plant's DNA and find its genetic roots.

"We can take the entire genome of one plant and look back at it," said Steven D. Tanksley, the Liberty Hyde Bailey professor of plant breeding at Cornell and an author on the paper. "We are going back into genetic time, and we can see what the ancient genome looked like. If we can understand what the ancestral gene content in one plant is, then we can use that to learn the gene content in other plants."

Tanksley and the lead researcher, Todd Vision, a Cornell visiting scientist, explained that for many plant genomes there is a lot of empty material between the proteins. Tanksley suggested that understanding a genome is like driving along a highway. On the East Coast, you do not have to drive far before you reach another city, while out west, there are long distances between cities.

The point of the analogy is that scientists can gather more general genetic information from Arabidopsis in a shorter period of time. Said Tanksley, "Arabidopsis is the East Coast of DNA sequencing."

The researchers used a computer program called BLAST to classify the thousands of genes in Arabidopsis into gene families. BLAST (an acronym for Basic Local Alignment Search Tool) is a sequence similarity program designed to support analysis of nucleotide and protein databases. It was developed at the National Center for Biotechnology Information, part of the National Institutes of Health, in Bethesda, Md. The researchers then used novel algorithms to find large chunks of the chromosomes that were duplicated long ago.

In the process of duplication, all the genetic material in a species doubles, creating what is known as a polyploid. The researchers inferred that Arabidopsis was an ancient polyploid because it contained evidence of multiple duplications.

Although duplicated chromosomes diverged from one another and became scrambled over the eons, the research team was able to find 103 duplicated chromosome segments that ranged in age from 50 million to 200 million years. "We figured out where gene family members are located and used that information to find the ancient duplicated segments," said Vision, who is a molecular biologist at the Center for Agricultural Bioinformatics (CAB) at Cornell. The CAB is supported by the USDA Agricultural Research Service in partnership with the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences and the Theory Center at Cornell.

With help from the dating estimates obtained by paleobotanists, the team was able to look at the duplicated gene sequences and deduce when the genome duplications in Arabidopsis occurred. The team found that a few large duplication events were responsible for the pattern they saw.

"Our work was entirely computational, but a lot of other researchers' laboratory work went into it before that," said Vision. He draws an analogy between finding prehistoric genetic relationships and the development of language.

Many words in Romance languages such as Spanish, Italian, French, and Portuguese are derived from Latin. "We can see the roots of the modern words as being derived from Latin," he said. "In our case, we are finding the genetic roots of the genes before they duplicated and diverged."

The paper, "The Origins of Genomic Duplications in Arabidopsis," was authored by Vision, Tanksley, and Daniel G. Brown of the Whitehead Institute at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Brown participated in the research while completing his doctoral degree, which he earned from the Department of Computer Science at Cornell last spring. The research was funded by the USDA Agriculture Research Service and grants from the National Science Foundation and the Office of Naval Research.

International Agrimarketing Center To Host Food Show Jan. 8

DOYLESTOWN (Bucks Co.) — Food companies in the Delaware Valley have an extraordinary opportunity to sell their products overseas during a one-time international food show Monday, Jan. 8 from 8 a.m. to noon at Meiji-En Restaurant, Philadelphia.

More than 25 serious overseas buyers will visit the show with the expressed goal of buying U.S. food products. These buyers are from France, Belgium, Holland, Hungary, Indonesia, Israel, Russia, Thailand, Korea, Singapore, Hong Kong, Egypt, the Czech Republic, Italy, Vietnam, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates.

They are seeking to purchase beef, pork, veal, lamb, poultry, seafood, deli products, cheeses, grocery products, beverages, cakes, cookies, candy and condiments, among other commodities.

Following the International Food Show, a seminar will be offered featuring August "Gus" Schumacher, under secretary of agriculture for USDA; Jim Cuorato, director of commerce for Philadelphia; and Jim Kenney, Philadelphia city councilman-at-large. At the conclusion of the seminar, the group will travel to Doylestown, where they will tour Delaware Valley College. Delaware Valley College is noted nationally as a leader in agricultural education.

Founded in 1896, the college is a comprehensive four-year institution of higher learning with nearly 1,400 men and women enrolled full-time in more than 35 academic programs, ranging from agribusiness, agricultural, biological and physical sciences, to business administration, computer information systems, English and secondary education. In addition, 700 students are enrolled on a part-time basis in DelVal's Continuing Education program, working to advance their careers.

The International Food Show is sponsored through a collaboration of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, Food Export USA-Northeast, The Delaware River Port Authority and the International Agrimarketing Center of Delaware Valley College.

Agriculture Makes Headlines In The New Millennium

tional venture was named AgStar Technologies.

The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture allocated $5.6 million to aid farmers in purchasing crop insurance. This money was in addition to the $60 million Pennsylvania used for disaster relief from the 1999 drought.

Also during February, Governor Ridge proposed a budget which included $135 million toward Pennsylvania's "Growing Greener" environmental effort.

Pennsylvania's Department of Agriculture (farmland preservation), Department of Environmental Protection (watershed protection and restoration), Department of Conservation of Natural Resources (grants to communities) and Pennsylvania Infrastructure Investment Authority (water and sewer projects) received the money.

In the last days of February, U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman announced the pork checkoff referendum in response to the call from Campaign for Family Farms.

March

Plum Pox hit the news again as Ag Secretary Samuel Hayes issued a treatment order requiring that infected orchards in Pennsylvania be destroyed by April 1, affecting 218 acres of trees.

April

The Pennsylvania Beef Council and Penn State University unveiled the "Blueprint for Success" program. The program provides cattle feeders with an education program meant to increase the beef value and improve profitability.

Meeting a deadline: more than 100 farms were preserved in 100 days before Earth Day. Since January, nearly $23 million was invested to preserve the farms.

May

New York's legislative leaders reached an agreement on the state budget, "one of the best for agriculture," reported Lancaster Farming.

The budget represented a historic $12 million reform of tax exemption programs for farmers, plus reductions in energy tax and restoration of various agricultural programs.

June

Pfizer Inc. and Warner-Lambert Co. completed one of the year's top mergers on June 19 for $116 billion. The merger was one of the top 210 worldwide mergers.

The 2000 "Simply Delicious" marketing campaign was kicked off with a check to Pennsylvania fruit and vegetable growers for the billboards and point-of-purchase materials. The campaign, in its fourth year, has grown to include more than 900 stores and 500 growers.

July

Plum Pox was again in the news, this time for a sweeter reason: The USDA compensated Pennsylvania fruit growers with up to $13.2 million for trees destroyed in an effort to control the disease.

In mid-July, Pennsylvania earned a certification from the USDA as having received bovine tuberculosis (TB) "accredited free state" status. This TB-free recognition came on the heels of a large scale effort in testing and meeting regulations.

The Dairy Forward Pricing Program officially began on July 19. The voluntary program allows dairy farmers and handlers to forward contract where they agree to terms by which the handler buys raw milk and the producer is paid.

August

Empire Farm Days, New York's largest agricultural showcase event, served as host to the New York State FFA and New York 4-H Tractor Operators contest for the first time, drawing 100 students from the state to compete in the contest.

Lebanon farmers received a symbolic check representing final payments under the Crop Loss Program and closing out the 1999 drought disaster relief program.

The Reading Fairground opened its doors on 60 acres of ground. Not only the acreage but much of the construction and money which covered additional costs was donated by the community.

September

One million pounds of waste pesticides were collected from all 67 Pennsylvania counties and 4,000 individuals who participated in the Chemsweep Program, making a significant contribution to water quality goals.

Somerset County Fair celebrated 100 years of fair seasons.

Melinda Wolfe, SUN area dairy princess, became Pennsylvania's dairy princess.

The All-American Dairy Show saw entries up 26 percent to 2,900 head, with 21 states represented. The aged cow grand champion of the Eastern National Holstein Show, owned by Tracy and Lindsey Weiker from Republic, Ohio, became supreme champion.

October

The value of cheese traded on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange dropped to the 1978 level on Oct. 10, at $1.0550 per pound.

Nationally, Ag Secretary Dan Glickman signed a declaration of emergency, authorizing the transfer of $44 million to expand the bovine tuberculosis eradication problem in the U.S.

November

A $300 million program was announced which encourages expanded production of fuels made from corn, soybeans, and other crops. Ethanol, a "biofuel" almost nonexistent 20 years ago, now accounts for 1.2 percent of the nation's gasoline supply. More than 5 percent of U.S. corn production goes to biofuel use.

Pennsylvania received the "Pseudorabies-Free State" certification from the USDA for the swine industry.

The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture awarded matching funds of up to $36,000 to the Pennsylvania Beef Council directed to the promotion of beef quality and safety in Pennsylvania through use of the Beef Quality Assurance guidelines and certification process.

December

The new farm equipment display will be featured at the 2001 Pennsylvania Farm Show, say officials. The display is sponsored by major farm equipment manufacturers and will be in the center of the main exhibit hall.

The USDA announces that it will begin accepting proposals to fund up to $1 million in competitive market and promotion projects for the U.S. lamb industry.

A new USDA rule put mandatory price reporting in place, making more market information available to the industry, available through USDA and NCBA Websites. Packers, processors, and importers that slaughter large amounts of swine and lambs and cattle must report price, volume, and terms of trade.

Ann M. Veneman, Sacramento, Calif., became the first woman to hold the office of national secretary of agriculture by president-elect George W. Bush.

Corn Growers Applaud Plant Genetic Mapping Breakthrough

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) recently applauded the announcement of the completion of the genome-sequencing project for a mustard plant, Arabidopsis.

This is the first complete plant genome sequence and the most complete sequence of any higher organisms, even more complete than the human genome announced earlier this summer.

The National Science Foundation, an independent government agency that focuses on funding basic research, made the announcement in Washington, D.C. The NSF said the Arabidopsis has become the plant counterpart to the lab mouse, providing clues to how many organisms work and with potential applications in agriculture, energy, and medicine. The mustard plant is a model for more than 250,000 other plant types.

"This is a breakthrough for plant research that will affect all corn growers, and NCGA members can take great pride that it was leadership by NCGA that led to the announcement," said Lee Klein, NCGA president and a farmer from Battle Creek, Neb. "Wednesday's announcement wouldn't have been possible without NCGA leading the effort to get major funding for the Plant Genome Initiative. Thanks to NCGA, this sequencing project is four years ahead of schedule."

Klein and NCGA member Bob Boeding of Iowa were in Washington, D.C., for the announcement.

"The NCGA knows that the future of the corn industry is written in corn's genetic code," Klein emphasized. "To compete internationally, the U.S. must continually work to maximize yield and minimize yield loss from disease, pests, and the weather without harming the environment. Modern biotechnology through plant genomics, holds the key to achieving this goal."

Arabidopsis is the smallest genome of all plants and is a valuable scientific model because of its short life span. The genome is the complete set of instructions for making an organism. It contains the master blueprint for all cellular structures and activities for the lifetime of the cell or organism. By understanding genomes, scientists can learn how genes contribute to the shape, function, and development of the whole plant and to use genes from corn and other significant crops to improve traits such as nutritional value, stress tolerance, and resistance to pests.

Since 1995, the NCGA has led efforts to obtain funding for corn genome and plant genome research. The "National Corn Genome Initiative" called for funding of a five-year, genome mapping, sequencing, and trait identification research program for corn. In 1997, the NCGA began calling for a "Plant Genome Initiative" to generate increased support for the project and in recognition of the fact that genome research in other plants would, ultimately, benefit to corn research efforts.

With the leadership of Senator Kit Bond, chairman of the Senate VA, HUD appropriations subcommittee, the NCGA secured $40 million for the first year (FY 1998) of a National Science Foundation (NSF) plant genome initiative. In providing the funding, the NSF was directed to accelerate the Arabidopsis full genome-sequencing project and to move beyond the current work towards more "economically important plant genome projects such as corn, wheat, rice, and soybeans." Since the first year's funding, an additional $200 million has gone to the NSF Plant Genome Initiative.

The benefits of this initiative include:

- Reduced worldwide malnutrition due to higher yielding and more nutritious crops.
- Development of tailored hybrids with valuable specialty starches, oils, and protein content.

tent.

- Revitalization of rural America because of a more robust agricultural sector.

- Expansion of plant-based renewable resources for energy and raw materials for chemicals.

- Significant reductions in crop losses and reliance on pesticides through improved biological control methods.

- Improved yields and reduced crop losses from heat, drought, and salt.

- Improved nitrogen-use efficiency.

- For livestock producers modify the digestibility of phosphorous in feed corn to reduce the amount of phosphorous that enters ground water.

- Development of tailored hybrids with valuable specialty starches, oils, and protein content.

The second edition of the nutrient management book, published this summer, offered an updated and improved resource for readers.

The Reference Guide to Animal Health and Housing also came on the scene in April, featuring professional input from leading experts to help producers establish and maintain sound management practices.

November 4 brought Lancaster Farming's 45th anniversary of reporting on agriculture news, price reports, features, columns, and advertising.

In June a writer joined the editorial staff. Lancaster native Michelle Ranck now covers livestock, dairy, and environmental issues for the paper.

The Antiques Center is a new addition to the "B" section. Weekly features spotlight quilts, collectibles, china, heritage toys, and advertising for the antique aficionados among our subscribers.

To help urban neighbors understand agriculture, Lancaster Farming developed an Internet site featuring the Cow Cam in cooperation with Kreider Dairy Farms in Manheim. A camera is now in place in the two-acre barn which takes a picture every few minutes and displays the activities of the cattle on the Website.

Electronic pagination also became a part of the "putting the paper to bed" routine at the end of every week. In mid-July Lancaster Farming began using computers to create the layout of the paper.

In early November the editorial staff accepted a Public Relations In Agriculture Award from the Berks County Farm-City Council.

This year brought lots of exciting changes and growth to not only this paper but also industry. We appreciate the opportunity to report on such an exciting and important business. The staff at Lancaster Farming wishes you the best in the new year as we approach 2001.

DETERMINING MARKET TRENDS
John Berry
Ag Marketing Educator
Penn State
Lehigh County

Most livestock and crop producers are not "day-traders" — participants in the market on a daily basis — nor should they be. A typical producer may enter the market only a few times in a marketing year, or only once, as when selling the crop at harvest.

Because producers are not day-traders, market trends are one of the most valuable tools, or indicators, that can be obtained from correctly executed charts.

Trends determine the direction the market might take for an extended period of time.

A trend usually continues until some major economic force enters the market, causing a change in direction. For example, if the U.S. has huge surplus stocks of corn, producers can expect a sideways (horizontal) price trend until either a severe drought or a dramatic increase in world demand lowers the surplus. Either of these developments, or a combination of the two, would cause the market to move from a sideways trend to an uptrend.

You can get a feel of the direction the market is taking by simply listening to market news on the radio. But charts provide a visual display of price movement that gives you, as a farm business operator or owner, a much better understanding of market trends. This is similar in principle to a road map, which shows specific twists and turns in the road, instead of just the general direction the traveler is going.

The three basic trend lines — sideways, uptrends, and downtrends — also are classified as to the time of trend patterns, because markets never move continuously in a smooth pattern. There are short-term, intermediate, and long-term trends. An example of trends within trends would be a short-term downtrend within a long-term uptrend in the market. A short-term trend generally is defined as lasting less than 20 days, an intermediate trend from one month to a maximum of six months, and a long-term trend continues six months or more.

Producers can plot trend lines on either a daily or weekly market chart. It's an individual decision on how much information is needed to fit the marketing needs of a particular enterprise, and how much time can be spent in charting.

The sideways trend is usually the longest running trend in the grain market. This is generally due to the presence of large surpluses accompanied by a steady demand pattern that does not lower the surplus level at a significant rate. Based on fundamental factors, intermediate and long term sideways trends normally appear at the bottom, or close to the bottom, of a trading range. Sideways trends can be frustrating for producers, especially because they occur at the bottom of the market. Sellers are always waiting for uptrend lines while buyers are holding out for downtrend lines.

The Uptrend Line

Draw the line along the bottoms of the market movement, connecting as many points as possible. The basic uptrend line serves two important functions:

- It shows the steepness of the upward direction.
- It is an indicator of how high prices might go, as long as the line is not broken.

The uptrend line is also a support line because it is drawn at the close of rallies. This is important: If the market closes two days in a row below the line or if the market is breaking through the support, the market can be expected to reverse its course.

Caution: The market may not immediately run into a downward trend, because rising markets generally have one last gasp at trying to continue upward before switching to a downtrend.

The Downtrend Line

Draw the line along the tops of rallies and connect as many points as possible. Because the market has difficulty penetrating this top line, it becomes a resistance line. Expect a change in market direction if the market closes above the downtrend two days in a row. Note: Downtrend lines often turn into sideways trend lines.

Conclusions

It is important to draw in both long-term and short-term trend lines. Knowing the direction prices are moving is one of the first steps in achieving a successful marketing plan. Trend lines give a strong indication of what can be expected in the future.

Decision To Ban Products

WASHINGTON, D.C. —

While no cases of bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE) or "mad cow disease" have been found in the U.S., Dr. Craig Reed of the USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service said the agency's decision to ban the import of meat and bone meal products from Europe is based on "sound science and extensive research."

Reed, administrator of APHIS, said the agency will continue "to take aggressive measures to protect the United States from BSE introduction and to ensure the security of U.S. export markets."

These measures include active surveillance, testing, prevention, education and emergency preparation, Reed said.

"In 1998, USDA entered into a cooperative agreement with Harvard University's School of Public Health to analyze and evaluate the Department's efforts to prevent BSE. A report is expected to be issued early next year," Reed said.

On Dec. 7, the USDA took an "emergency action" in prohibiting the import of all rendered animal protein products, regardless of species, from Europe. The move mirrored actions taken by the European Union in November to prevent the spread of BSE. The EU banned the feed of nonruminant origin, which they determined was potentially cross-contaminated with the BSE agent.

The same type of rendered product from ruminant origin has been banned from BSE infected countries since 1989 and all of Europe since 1997.

FDA Finalizes Safe Handling Labels, Refrigeration Requirements For Marketing Eggs

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Consumers will soon have more safe handling information and new refrigeration requirements to help prevent foodborne illness from eggs contaminated with Salmonella Enteritidis.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) recently issued a final regulation to improve food safety as it pertains to eggs. The refrigeration requirement will be effective in six months, while the safe handling requirement will be effective in nine months.

"The Clinton administration has consistently demonstrated its commitment to food safety and ensuring that the United States continues to have one of the safest food supplies in the world," said Dr. Jane E. Henney, FDA commissioner. "Today's efforts should go a long way toward preventing illness that has been attributed to eggs in the past."

The regulation will require shell egg cartons to bear safe handling instructions because of eggs' association with Salmonella Enteritidis (SE), a bacterium responsible for foodborne illness. Approximately one out of every 20,000 eggs produced in the U.S. is estimated to be contaminated with SE. The required statement is as follows:

SE outbreaks have been attributed to undercooked eggs and foods containing undercooked eggs served in homes, private gatherings and commercial establishments.

"For consumers, eggs can be an important source of nutrition," said Henney. "You just need to cook your eggs thoroughly — no sunny side up, no over easy. This is a case when it's better to be safe than sorry."

Persons infected with SE may experience diarrhea, fever, abdominal cramps, headache, nausea and vomiting. However, children, the elderly and persons with weakened immune systems may develop severe or even life-threatening illness.

Additionally, the rule requires that eggs be placed promptly under refrigeration at 45 degrees Fahrenheit or lower upon delivery at retail establishments (supermarkets, restaurants, delis, caterers, vending operations, hospitals, nursing homes and schools). Refrigeration at an ambient temperature of 45 degrees Fahrenheit or cooler slows the growth and development of SE.

This rule is one part of the larger Egg Safety Action Plan, a farm-to-table approach for ensuring the safety of our nation's egg supply, which was announced by the President on Dec. 11, 1999. The plan, a joint effort by the FDA and the Department of Agriculture, seeks to reduce by 50 percent the number of SE illnesses attributed to contaminated eggs by 2005 and eliminate egg-associated SE illnesses by 2010.

The Egg Safety Action Plan will further enhance the strides that have already been made in reducing the incidence of SE. Efforts by federal regulatory agencies, public health prevention initiatives, egg producer quality assurance programs, and consumer education have significantly contributed to the decrease in SE incidence.

2001 National Highland Show The Largest Ever

DENVER, Colo. — The American Highland Cattle Association's (AHCA) National Show and Sale will be the largest showing of Highland cattle in North America.

Over 200 animals from across the U.S. and Canada will compete.

The AHCA National Show will be held on Friday, Jan. 19 at the National Western Stock Show in Denver, Colo. In addition to the show, 50 top consignments will be auctioned at the National Sale on Saturday, Jan. 20.

May 3-6 will be the annual convention in Harrisburg, and will focus on farm tours, hands-on workshops, a bull test sale and regional show.

In 2001, the Highland breed has two performance bull tests, one in Wyoming and the other in New York. These tests are an excellent tool for breeders to evaluate their bulls and select new herd sires.

Highland cattle are known for their distinctive look, long flowing hair and wide horns. They originated in the Highlands of Scotland, where their ruggedness and maternal abilities were of paramount importance. Recently, cattlemen have not only appreciated their calving ease and lower maintenance, but are also discovering the tender, flavorful and well-marbled beef they produce.

The Queen of England raises Highland cattle and serves Highland beef. At the national show, all bulls will be ultrasound to assist the judge and breeders in selecting animals that produce lean, well-marbled carcasses.

The National Show and Sale is just one of many activities and programs AHCA is offering its members. In fact, this show is the culmination of "Roll of Excellence" season where cattle from across the country competed in over a dozen recognized point shows. This year, the Highland Production Record System (HPRS) will be introduced to help breeders manage and improve their herds.

AHCA has held this annual event at the National Western Stock Show since 1989. It has grown in popularity and this year's promises to be the best ever. The cattle will arrive Wednesday and all will be weighed and bulls ultrasounded.

Thursday evening a seminar and reception is set for members and other interested persons. The show is Friday, starting with junior breeding heifers followed by the record setting open show. On Saturday, 50 top lots will be offered at the National Sale.

For more information on any AHCA activity or the Highland breed, contact the American Highland Cattle Association at (303) 292-9102, ahca@envisionet.net or check the web site at www.hIGHLANDCATTLE.ORG.

Scottish Highlands originated in the Highlands of Scotland where their ruggedness and maternal abilities were of paramount importance.

Megan Little Is New Member Of American Angus Association

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. — Megan Little, New Providence, is a new junior member of the American Angus Association, reports Dick Spader, executive vice president of the national organization with headquarters in St. Joseph, Mo.

Junior members of the association are eligible to register cattle in the American Angus Association and take part in Association sponsored shows and other national and regional events.

The American Angus Association is the largest beef registry association in the world, with more than 35,000 active adult and junior members.

Bowman Family: 'We Just Do The Best Job We Can'

Said Gary, "we receive a lot of help from our families. Both sides pitch in, either with milking or the fieldwork. They help make it all work."

Gary has seen a big difference in the industry in his years of farming. "It is changing fast and I don't know how to feel about that. It's more of a business, which takes some of the fun out of it, but it's different for every farmer's situation."

Regarding trends of the business, Bowman has noticed more fluctuation in milk price. "The margin of error isn't what is used to be. In order to make a living, it's a more detailed business than in the past."

"The trend is to the bigger herds and expansion. I don't see doing that myself, but it does seem like that is the trend. It seems like you have to keep milking more cows to make a living. For us, instead of milking more cows, we went to three times a day — that was our expansion. I still like small herds, tiestall barns, and the individual attention I can give to each cow."

No Trade Secrets

According to Gary, milking three times a day is a large factor in the herd's low somatic cell count, as the extra milking takes stress off of the cow and the udder. The cows are milked at 5 a.m., 1 p.m., and 8 p.m.

"The biggest issue is labor," said Gary. "We have five people we can call if we want to go anywhere, so we've been fortunate that way."

"I think that in lowering the somatic cell count, three times a day milking has made the biggest difference. I'm not here to push it (milking three times a day). You have to want to do it, it's not for everyone, but we have seen a difference."

"If a cow is a heavy milker and gets milked two times a day, you'll have a better chance of mastitis if she's leaking all day and laying in her stall," said Jenny.

The rolling herd average is 25,000 pounds, with 994 pounds of fat and more than 750 pounds protein. The rolling average cell count is 70,000.

"The first thing people always ask is, 'What is your secret, what's the trick?'" said Gary. "The second thing they want to know is what kind of teat dip we use. We've tried all different kinds."

The brand, according to Jenny, is not the trade secret; however using teat dip is important. The couple uses a basic iodine dip.

Gary believes that teat dip is relied upon too heavily. "You can't dip a cow and then let her lay in mud and expect the teat dip to take care of everything. As far as a secret or trick, there is none."

However keeping the cows clean and not letting them lie down in a dirty stall is key, said Jenny.

Routinely budgeting time for stall maintenance is another reason for a lower cell count.

"We try to just keep the stalls cleaned and bedded every day. There is no real trick to it, we just make sure that we do," said Gary.

Bedding, while not a major factor, may also contribute to cow health. "We used to use hardwood sawdust and we had some trouble with mastitis," said Gary. "The vet recommended we go to softwood shavings, so that's what we did and we like them better."

Mark, 2, makes friends with the farm's resident cat, "Mary."

The Bowmans also practice careful herd management to keep somatic cell counts low. "If we have a cow that's consistently high, she usually ends up going for beef, even if she's a good milker," said Jenny.

Fresh air and ranging over the pasture also gives the Bowman's herd a health boost. "We turn the milk cows out in the summer overnight and in winter for exercise in the morning if the weather's cooperating. I'm a big fan of giving the cows exercise. I think that's important," Gary said.

Workday Focus

Although field work takes time from the Bowman's workday, "most of our day is spent working around cattle," he said. They breed 100 percent AI.

"I used to breed the cows myself, but when we went to milking three times a day we got busier, so now we have a technician."

"We focus on the udders, that's the first thing we look at. We also look at the feet and legs and overall cow. We breed more for type than for milk, since we want to breed for a cow that's going to last for many lactations."

"We feel that with nutrition and milking, we can get milk out of them since we don't breed straight for milk. We don't sacrifice type for milk."

"Getting milk boils down to good forage. If you don't have good forage, it's tough going. That's what we found."

Producers can make up a good ration, said Gary, "but if the forage didn't test well it's harder to get good production out of the ration."

The Bowmans buy shelled corn and a concentrate, but grow the remaining feed on the farm's 100 tillable acres.

Gary said, "We do have a lot of help with the fieldwork, and we get some custom work done. I enjoy fieldwork, but the cows more. After a while, I'd sooner be in the barn."

"We also spend a lot of time with our dry cows, and we try not to neglect them," said Gary. As soon as a cow is dry, the Bowmans put her out on their 20-acre pasture.

"It seems to be a good, clean environment for the cow. It is up on a hill, so there are no mud holes. I found that to really help. I also vaccinate the dry cows with a J5 vaccine."

They noticed more mastitis problems in the winter than in the summer when the cows are on the pasture more often.

The couple has also had success with double-dosage dry cow treatments. "If a cow calves and is consistently high in cell counts for her first lactation, over 3.5 cell count, when I dry her off I'll give her two instead of one dry cow tube per quarter. But some cows are just consistently high," said Gary.

Gary takes care of the morning feeding. "I enjoy fieldwork, but the cows more. After a while, I'd sooner be in the barn," he said.

Jenny hangs up the milkers in preparation for one of the three-times-a-day milkings at the farm.

Finding Fulfillment

The opportunity to put down roots keeps the Bowman family at Four Leaf Acres. The couple is not looking to expand or leave the farm, where they are "pretty content," Gary said. "We've moved too many times already. We don't want to move again."

"We like this farm and we have a good relationship with our landlord. We are also thankful for our good neighbors," said Jenny.

Although dairy farming may be demanding, the work also offers fulfillment. "There's definitely satisfaction in it," he said. "You get out of it what you put into it. I do enjoy cows and working with cows. I guess farming has always been a challenge to me. You could say it's in our blood. As with any job, there are times when I wonder why I'm doing it, but being able to raise our family on a farm is important to us. It teaches them a good work ethic and that not everything in life goes as planned. The fact is, we enjoy working with cows."

Dairy Farm Accounting - Computer Training

Dairy producers, their spouses and anyone else who is interested in sharpening their computerized accounting skills are encouraged to attend a four-part training series designed to improve and standardize dairy farm accounting procedures. The hands-on computer training sessions will be offered in four counties throughout the Capital Region including: Lancaster, York, Franklin and Adams counties.

Basic computerized farm accounting concepts will be demonstrated using QuickBooks Pro for Windows. Instruction includes basic operation of the accounting system, special dairy farm accounting issues, entering feed costs, and enterprise accounting.

Report demonstrations include cash and accrual profit-and-loss statements, budget reports, payroll, and employment tax reports, and determining cost of production per unit. Participants will receive a sample file with a chart of accounts that is setup and ready to use for their farm.

Tim Beck, Regional Dairy Program Coordinator, will instruct two days of the workshop focusing on specific computer skills and knowledge required to operate the accounting system. Participants will practice general program operation including data entry, setting up the program and printing reports. Specific topics to be addressed include:

- Introduction to Software
- Setting Up the Program
- Basic Operation of the Accounting System
- Generating Reports

Brad Hilty, Dairy Alliance Information Management Specialist, will teach dairy accounting practices during two days of the course. To properly analyze and benchmark financial information, producers need to consistently categorize and record transactions regardless of the accounting software used to maintain farm records. Working with industry financial leaders throughout Pennsylvania, Brad has developed a standardized chart of accounts to record dairy information in a consistent manner. During two days of the program, participants will learn to use this chart of accounts and will receive instruction on developing and interpreting reports.

Topics to be covered include:

- Standardized Chart of Accounts
- Understanding Financial Statements
- Special Accounting Issues

- Enterprise Accounting
- Benchmarking and Analyzing Data

All sessions are conducted from 9:30 AM to 3:00 PM. Locations and dates are as follows:

January 15, 19, 23, 26, Lancaster County Extension Office.

January 22, 25, 29, Feb. 2, York County Extension Office

February 5, 7, 9, 12, Adams County Extension Office.

February 19, 21, 23, 26, Franklin County Extension Office

Registration fee for the four-day sessions is $75 for each participant. Lunch is on your own. Space is limited and registrations will be accepted on a first-come basis. To register, contact the Customer Service desk at the York County Extension Office, 112 Pleasant Acres Road, York PA 17402. Telephone 717-840-7408, FAX 717-755-5968 or email Tim Beck at tbeck@psu.edu

National Corn Growers Association Announces Corn Yield Contest Winners

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Francis Childs has done it again. The Manchester, Iowa, farmer produced 357.3 bushels per acre to reclaim first place in the 2000 National Corn Yield Contest (NCYC).

The popular National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) contest drew more than 3,500 farmers from throughout the nation.

While they earned him the top prize in the 2000 NCYC, Childs' yields were down significantly from his 1999 record yield of 393.7 bushels per acre — citing a hailstorm that reduced his plant population and lowered his overall yield.

Weather once again played a significant role in yields ranging from the winning 357.3 bushels to the lowest national yield of 216.7 bushels per acre.

"It's interesting to note that the majority of the winners were east of the Mississippi River," said NCGA President Lee Klein of Battle Creek, Neb. "Growers in eastern states who endured devastating droughts in previous years finally enjoyed better-than-ideal growing conditions this year."

He noted that hot and dry conditions pulled yields down in Nebraska and Kansas while a store that passed through the central Corn Belt before harvest damaged crops in key corn growing states like Iowa and Illinois.

"However, despite this kind of adversity, our growers once again showed their true skills and knowledge when it comes to production agriculture," Klein said.

Winners of this year's NCYC will be recognized at the 2001 Commodity Classic, the annual combined convention and trade show of the NCGA and the American Soybean Association Feb. 25-27 in San Antonio, Texas. Along with national recognition, winners receive prizes from participating seed and crop protection companies.

Contest participants also improve their operations by getting a unique opportunity to compare their own proven corn production capabilities with farmers in their states and across the country. The NCYC's goal is to educate farmers on improving their methods of production to increase profitability while addressing environmental concerns.

Penn State Educator Receives National Diversity Award

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Patreese Ingram, assistant professor of agricultural and extension education in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, received the USDA Cooperative State Research, Education and Extension Service's "National Annual Award for Diversity" for her exceptional leadership in diversity education.

"This award recognizes the cultural sensitivity and appreciation for diversity in Dr. Ingram's programming, as well as the large number and variety of people she's reached," said Ted Alter, associate vice president for outreach and director of Penn State Cooperative Extension. "She has provided extraordinary leadership and made an uncommonly significant contribution towards the achievement of diversity in extension programming."

"This is a very special honor and the highest national award that is given within the land-grant system for diversity," said Marilyn Corbin, Penn State Cooperative Extension's state program leader for children, youth, and families. "We are most proud and pleased that Dr. Ingram has earned it."

By the year 2056, people of color — including African Americans, Hispanics, Asian and Pacific Islanders, and American Indians, Eskimos and Aleuts — are expected to be the majority population in the United States. As our society becomes more diverse, Ingram explains, it's important that we learn to appreciate and understand our differences and to work effectively with people who are unlike ourselves.

"We may not see diversity in our immediate community," she said, "but our children will experience it."

Ingram's programs are designed to increase people's awareness and appreciation of differences, as well as their ability to communicate and relate effectively with diverse populations. These differences may include age, class, ethnicity, gender, physical and mental ability, race, sexual orientation, and spiritual practice. Her programs have impacted many people in the state. She also has reached people in other states through her Website (<http://AgExtEd.cas.psu.edu/FCS/pi/pimenu.html>), publications, articles in national journals, and presentations at national conferences and meetings.

The National Diversity Award is sponsored by the Subcommittee on Extension Diversity, a national subcommittee of the Personnel and Organization Development Committee of the Cooperative State Research, Education and Extension Service.

Revenue Crop Protection Available In Six Pa. Counties

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Diversified farmers in six Pennsylvania counties are now eligible for an innovative whole farm insurance revenue insurance pilot program called the Adjusted Gross Revenue Crop Insurance Program.

This new crop insurance is available in Berks, Carbon, Lackawanna, Lehigh, Monroe, and Northampton counties for the 2001 insurance year, according to John Berry, agricultural marketing agent.

"The whole farm insurance should work well for Pennsylvania's family farms that grow multiple crops. Many of these diversified producers have few options under traditional crop insurance programs," said Berry.

The adjusted gross revenue insurance plan provides insurance based on the lesser of the individual producer's previous five-year average Schedule F tax information or the expected revenue for the insurance year. This single insurance product covers all agricultural commodities produced by the policyholder. Expanding the whole farm pilot program will provide more experience in insuring whole farm income throughout the U.S.

A listing of crop insurance agents is available at local Farm Service Agency offices and USDA Service Centers. Sales closing date for AGR is Jan. 31, 2001.

The Adjusted Gross Revenue (AGR) insurance plan is a non-traditional whole farm risk management tool. The AGR concept uses a producer's historic Schedule F tax form information as a base to provide a level of guaranteed revenue.

animal products and aquaculture reared in a controlled environment. Incidental livestock income represents the crop production value fed to livestock.

AGR protection is calculated by multiplying the approved gross revenue times the percent coverage level and payment rate selected by the producer. The approved gross revenue is the smaller of the average of the producer's prior five years of Schedule F tax information. The average gross revenue can be adjusted for expanded operations or expected revenue for the insurance year.

For example, a producer with a $100,000 approved gross revenue who chose 80/75 coverage would have $60,000 protection ($100,000 x 80 percent coverage x 75 percent payment).

Loss payments are triggered when the adjusted gross income for the insured year is less than the loss inception point. The loss inception point is calculated by multiplying the approved gross revenue by the chosen percent coverage (65, 75, or 80). Once a loss is triggered, the payment rate is 75 percent of the revenue shortfall. Loss payment for this example would trigger when the income for the insurance year is below $80,000 ($100,000 x 80 percent coverage).

Producer eligibility requirements include:

- Filed five consecutive years of Schedule F tax forms. For 2000, the 1994-1998 tax years.
- Produces eligible commodities.
- U.S. citizen or resident.
- Files calendar year farm tax return.
- No more than 50 percent of allowable income is earned from purchase and resale of agricultural commodities.

• No more than 35 percent of allowable income is from animals and animal products.

• Must have Multi Peril Crop Insurance (MPCI) when more than 50 percent of allowable income is from insurance crops.

This summary is for general illustration only. Please contact a private insurance agent to learn more details about AGR and other crop insurance products.

AGR:

• Provides an insurance safety net for multiple agricultural commodities in one insurance product.

• Establishes a common denominator for commodity production cash receipts.

• Makes simple and straightforward use of income tax forms.

• Reinforces program creditability by using Internal Revenue Service tax forms and regulations.

The AGR product provides the producer protection against low farm revenue due to unavoidable causes. Covered farm revenue is income from agricultural commodities reported on the Schedule F tax form, including incidental amounts of income from animals and NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — The Lebanon County Dairy Day, conducted at the Lebanon Valley Expo Center Dec. 1, featured several educational topics of concern to the area's dairy farmers.

Extension veterinarian/field investigator from Penn State University, Dr. David Griswold, DVM, began the day with a lecture titled "Johne's Disease — Positive or Negative," to address Pennsylvania's state testing program.

A voluntary, industry-sponsored program to reduce the risk of Johne's Disease, the program has three options or tracks. The herd owner is required to designate one of the three options and a herd plan is written.

The first option is the "participation stage." At this stage the herd owner meets with a veterinarian to review goals and management and develop a herd plan which incorporates best management practices. The herd plan is then implemented and progress evaluated at least annually by the herd veterinarian.

The "control stage" incorporates the participation stage's requirements with a testing program and a commitment to manage test-positive animals.

Lastly, the status program stage is for herds which have at least one negative test of 30 second or higher-lactation animals and will follow the guidelines of the National Johne's Disease Status program.

Dr. Peter Tozer, assistant professor of dairy and animal science from Penn State, addressed heifer raising costs. Tozer expanded on economic awareness, management, and economic concerns of contract or home-raised heifers.

Replacement heifers rank as the second or third largest component of production costs after feed and possibly labor on most farms.

To save on heifer raising costs, management begins with minimizing calf morbidity and mortality rates with a good dry cow vaccination program, colostrum management, sanitation, and proper nutrition and care of the newborn.

Ownership costs include buildings, equipment, property, machinery, repairs and taxes, all of which should be considered when evaluating ownerships costs in a heifer-raising program.

Operating costs include feed, labor, bedding, utilities, veterinary care, and breeding costs. The two most expensive age periods, based on total costs per day to raise a heifers, are birth to weaning and bred to pretresh. Managing the length or expense of these times may have a great impact on the cost to raise a heifer.

In addition a chore assignment or accountability system on a chart may also aid in good labor management, another key to success in cost management.

Penn State offers a Costs to Raise a Replacement Heifer Spreadsheet (CRRH), a Microsoft Excel spreadsheet to calculate heifer raising costs. The CRRH is separated into ten worksheets.

Dan McFarland, ag engineering for Penn State Capital Region Area, gave a presentation on the topic of transition barns for dry cows and heifers.

Director of animal health and herd economics with Keystone Agway, Dr. Charlie Gardner, DVM, addressed rumen acidosis and laminitis. Dr. Gardner

Producers Approve Amendments To Federal Milk Orders

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Producers supplying milk for each of the 11 federal milk markets have approved amending the current Class III and Class IV pricing formulas under federal milk orders.

USDA determined producer approval by polling the producer cooperative associations in eight of the markets, and by conducting referenda in the Northeast, Mideast, and Upper Midwest markets.

The interim amended orders will become effective for milk marketed on or after Jan. 1, 2001.

This interim final rule responds to a Congressional mandate to reconsider the Class III and Class IV pricing formulas included in the final rule for the consolidation and reform of Federal milk orders.

USDA conducted a hearing May 8-12, 2000, in Alexandria, Va., to consider proposals submitted by the industry to change the formulas. A tentative final decision on these amendments was announced on Dec. 7. Comments are due on or before Feb. 5, 2001.

For copies of this rule and additional information, contact any market administrator office. The interim final rule and additional background information can be accessed on the Web at <http://www.ams.usda.gov/dairy>.

Pa. Junior Holstein Convention Feb. 2-4

WEST MIDDLESEX (Mercer Co.) — Have you ordered your tickets yet?

Friday activities will include the annual meeting of the Pennsylvanian Junior Holstein Association along with the mixer complete with a DJ for a dance and a few special surprises and activities. There will also be plenty of food and drink for everyone to enjoy while they renew old acquaintances and meet some new friends from around the state.

Saturday is packed full of contests and activities that begin with dairy bowl and speech contests. There will also be an extemporaneous speaking contest this year with sign-up at the convention and speeches given on Saturday.

Juniors are encouraged to get their entries in for both of these state contests. The will be an opportunity to learn more about DHIA and how it can benefit your dairy operation.

The association will also be offering the chance for juniors to go ice skating on Saturday afternoon. There will be a tour to a large cheese plant where mozzarella cheese is produced.

Following the Saturday evening meal, the association members will hear the winning speeches presented along with a dance and some special surprises.

Sunday morning will conclude with the awards breakfast, where juniors are recognized for their achievements over the past year.

There will be a well-stocked dairy bar along with commercial exhibitors who are available to share their industry knowledge with the juniors. There will also be the photo contest, display contest, and plenty of opportunity to visit with friends from across the state.

The Radisson Hotel has an indoor swimming pool and an arcade room along with all the other amenities of a conference hotel. Make sure to get you hotel and ticket order information in by Jan. 12.

For contest entry forms or additional information on Pennsylvania Junior Holstein activities, contact Pennsylvania Holstein Association, 839 Benner Pike, State College, PA 16801, (814) 234-0364.

WEST MIDDLESEX (Mercer Co.) — Join the fun in 2001 as the Northwest District offers a mid winter break from the dairy farming routine at the Radisson Hotel.

The Radisson is located in West Middlesex, Pa. just off of I-80 at exit 1-N.

In addition to the board of directors meeting on Wednesday, Feb. 21, the host committee offers an afternoon tour to Control Molding and Plastics Company and the Wendell August Forge Company. The convention banquet will be Wednesday evening.

The Hall of Fame winners and Distinguished Young Holstein Breeder winner will be announced. After dinner, the Millcreek Ramblers will provide entertainment and dancing will follow.

The Annual Meeting will be held on Thursday, Feb. 22. Members will have a chance to meet Bud Leckie, President of the National Association.

The Ladies Program this year will begin at 12:15 p.m. to allow the ladies to attend the morning session of the annual meeting and participate in the ladies program.

The ladies' luncheon and program will be held at the Oak Tree Country Club with entertainment.

The convention sale will highlight Thursday evening. Consignments are currently being sought. If you are interested in consigning, please contact either Mike Weimer at (814) 498-2047 or Bill Allen at (717) 944-1374.

Friday, Feb. 23 will be the awards breakfast. Award recipients will be honored and Walter Shide will speak.

The convention will also include a fully stocked dairy bar and many commercial exhibits that will highlight the new technology available to the dairy industry.

Maximize Milk Checks Without Expanding Dairy Operation

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Dairy farmers can increase their milk checks without expanding their herd. It just takes a little more management and some shopping around, said Tom Noyes, dairy agent at the Wayne County office of Ohio State University Extension.

There is probably an opportunity for some producers to gain at least an additional $1.50 per hundred pounds of milk produced, Noyes said.

And, with milk prices more than $1 per hundred pounds lower than normal, maximizing the milk check is more important now than ever, he said. The current All Milk Price — the base price of milk plus additions for butterfat, protein and other solids content — is about $12.50 per hundredweight. The average All Milk Price received by Ohio dairy farmers over the past 10 years is $13.76 per hundredweight.

"You can affect what your milk price is through management on the farm and looking at different marketing alternatives," he said. "You could gain $1 per hundredweight just by altering what you do on your farm."

Improving milk quality by lowering the somatic cell count and controlling other factors could make a noticeable difference. Somatic cells are animal body cells present at low levels in normal milk. High levels of these cells in milk — caused by things such as mastitis infection, udder injuries, stress, poor milking procedures and cow age — indicate abnormal, reduced-quality milk. Milk with a high somatic cell count has a shorter shelf life, yields less cheese and may have poor flavor, Noyes said.

In Federal Order 33, which includes Ohio, the milk price producers receive is adjusted up or down by how much their milk's somatic cell count is below or above 350,000 cells per milliliter. Milk below 350,000 cells per milliliter gets a premium, while milk above 350,000 is discounted.

"In Federal Order 33, about 53 percent of the milk produced has a somatic cell count between 201,000 and 400,000 cells per milliliter," Noyes said. "That means more than half of the milk produced is discounted or receives only a small bonus. Another 25 percent of the milk has counts worse than 400,000. So there is definitely room for improvement in gaining take home dollars through reducing somatic cell counts."

The premium amounts vary by market and can range from 10 cents per hundredweight to $1 per hundredweight. Additional bonuses often are paid for producing premium quality milk for consecutive months, he said. All quality programs also are based on milk being free of antibiotics, added water, low sediment and off flavors.

Based on the milk supply, some buyers may offer over order premiums. These are bonuses above the market price for milk within a federal order offered simply to secure milk for a buyer. They are not based on quality. The more competition there is for milk, the higher these bonuses may be, Noyes said. They often range from zero to 30 cents per hundredweight and vary by month.

Dairy farmers can adjust their production to take advantage of seasonal bonuses. These bonuses often occur in the fall when children are going back to school and demand for milk increases. The problem is, many producers often get their highest milk production in the spring, when grass and hay supplies flourish, but the school year is almost over. So finding ways to increase fall production could be beneficial, he said.

However, with expanding dairy herds, milk production across the United States is becoming more consistent throughout the year. So, seasonal bonuses have diminished and may not be around much longer, Noyes said.

Bonuses also exist for milk with high levels of protein. Some buyers are paying 10 cents per pound of protein in milk. Having a high protein dairy herd can add significantly to the bottom line, Noyes said.

"You have to shop around for the market that best suits your milk," he said. "And once the buyer who pays the best premium is found, producers have to be willing to change where they ship their milk, so they can get the best price possible. Ohio producers often are loyal and are hesitant to shift buyers. But, the decision should depend on the price."

In the long run, taking advantage of premium prices could really pay off. For a 100-cow Holstein operation producing 20,000-pounds of milk per cow per year, an extra $1.50 per hundred pounds of milk produced would garner $30,000 of additional income per year.

By adjusting management practices, producers could probably obtain these bonuses with little or no added production costs, Noyes said. Just make sure barns are well ventilated, stalls are well bedded, the operation is clean, and proper milking techniques are followed.

"There is obviously additional money to be made by producing high quality milk and shopping around to find the market that will be to your advantage," he said.

Plain or Barbecue? Chips Cheap, Healthy Alternative Feed for Pigs

WOOSTER, Ohio - Hog producers seeking a cheaper, alternative feed to corn have to look no further than their grocer's shelves.

Two Ohio State University Agricultural Technical Institute (ATI) researchers have found that it doesn't matter if it's barbecue, sour cream and onion, or plain - potato chips are the snack of choice for pigs. And not only is the wholesale price for potato chip scraps cheaper than corn, but the chips provide the pigs with a higher energy diet.

Sha Rahnema and Ronald Borton have found that consistently replacing 12.5 percent of the corn feed with potato chip scraps during the nursery, growing and finishing stages of pigs provided optimum performance in dry matter intake, average daily weight gain and the number of days required for pigs to reach market weight.

The finding is the latest in a series of studies since 1995 that has focused on the effect consuming potato chip scraps has on the performance of pigs. Previous studies showed that up to 25 percent of a pig's diet may include potato chip scraps, but not

He found that varying the diet during the growth stages had less of an impact on performance than feeding the pigs a continuous 12.5 percent diet of chips. The diet variation reduced overall intake and resulted in a longer time period for the pigs to reach market weight.

"Chips are higher in energy than corn, so the pigs would eat less at the growing and finishing phases, ultimately gaining less weight and taking longer to reach market weight," said Rahnema.

Studying the effects of potato chip consumption in pigs spawned from an ATI class project six years ago, where students were looking for a cheaper substitute for corn as a viable energy source. They came up with potato chips, which have 33 percent fat. By price comparison, potato chip scraps run $6 to $7.50 a ton as compared to corn, which is currently running more than $75 a ton. The researchers mixed the potato chip scraps with the corn and fed the feed to the pigs in a pellet form. But Rahnema said the researchers also directly added the chips to the corn in the feed troughs, which produced the same results.

"Mixing chips in with the corn feed has shown to have no adverse effects on the pigs and can be a profitable alternative to the current diet," said Rahnema.

So how would a pork chop taste after a pig has been munching on jalapeno-flavored or vinegar-flavored chips? Part of the study also included a taste panel that sampled pork based on juiciness, tenderness, odor and flavor.

"The panel couldn't tell the difference between pork from pigs that had been fed the potato chips diet and those that weren't fed with chips," said Rahnema. "In fact, the panel agreed that in one instance, the pork from the chip-fed pig was juicier and tasted better."

The researchers are currently planning on testing their potato chip diet on chickens.

Farmers Union Applauds Organic Standards

AURORA, Colo. — The National Farmers Union (NFU) applauds the announcement by the USDA of the final rule on organic standards.

"We are pleased with the rule that provides guidelines and will help farmers take advantage of the growing market for organic products," said NFU President Leland Swenson. "In addition, consumers both in the U.S. and abroad will have a clear choice in their food-buying decisions."

Most notably, the new standards were revised to say that no food could be called organic if irradiation, sewage sludge, or genetic engineering was used in its production.

"The rule provides a huge opportunity for organic growers, with organic product sales having increased 20 percent each year since 1990," Swenson said.

Agriculture products labeled organic must originate from farms or handling operations certified by a state or private agency accredited by USDA. Farms and handling operations that sell less than $5,000 worth per year of organic products are exempt from certifications. Farmers and handlers have 18 months to comply with the national standards.

Consumers will begin to see new organic labeling on products in their grocery stores by the summer of 2001, with full implementation by mid-2002.

with optimum benefits. Pigs consuming a diet of 20-25 percent of potato chips during the growing and finishing stages took longer to reach market weight. Earlier studies also revealed that potato chip scraps had the most positive effect on nursery pigs, speculating that starting pigs on high levels of chips, then decreasing the amount during the growing and finishing phases may improve feed efficiency and decrease the overall number of days on feed.

The purpose of the current research was to determine the effect of varying the level of potato chip scraps during the nursery, growing and finishing stages of the pig, while keeping the control at a continuous potato chip diet of 12.5 percent throughout all three stages of growth. The study involved starting the pigs on a 10 percent diet of chips and increasing that amount throughout the growth stages to 20 percent, as well as feeding nursery pigs high levels of chips and reducing that amount during growth.

Researchers were hoping the results would provide producers with the best balance of potato chips in the diet with the biggest impact on market performance.

"Increasing or decreasing the levels during the various growth stages seemed to have no effect at all over the continuous feeding of the 12.5 percent diet," said Rahnema.

Powell Rambouillets Garner Top Honors In Show Ring

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent
WINDHAM CENTER
(Bradford Co.) — When it comes to picking and showing award winning sheep, Doris Powell and Greg Strausbaugh usually agree.

But the 2000 show year turned into a contest that will long be remembered.

Powell and Strausbaugh operate Powell Rambouillets in northern Bradford County. Powell, who has had sheep for as long as she can remember, and Strausbaugh, who became interested in sheep while a student at Penn State, make showing sheep their hobby, following the tan-bark trail to several shows every year.

Early in the year 2000, Powell and Strausbaugh were looking over their fall ram lambs trying to pick which one they would show.

"We narrowed it down to a pair of ram lambs. I said I'm going to show this one and he said I choose this one," said Powell.

So the competition began.

The first show was the Maryland Sheep and Wool Festival in May. Strausbaugh's ram won, capturing grand champion honors. From there they attended the Harford Fair in Susquehanna County. At that show, Powell's ram won top honors.

"We were even at that time," said Strausbaugh with a laugh.

They again packed the show string to head to the Big E in Springfield, Mass., where Powell's ram again garnered champion honors while Strausbaugh's ram wore the reserve champion banner.

The judges' decision at the Keystone International Livestock Exposition (KILE) again put Powell's ram over Strausbaugh's ram.

"She thought she had the battle won," said Strausbaugh, but then we went to Louisville, Ky.

In Louisville, Strausbaugh figures that the score was evened out as his ram was named champion Rambouillet ram. But to add to the glory of the show, Strausbaugh's ram, Powell 9955, was chosen as the supreme champion of the show over 19 breeds of sheep.

"When I won supreme champion, I figure I won the whole competition," said Strausbaugh. "It's funny, because people were beginning to watch the Rambouillet show to see which ram would win."

Besides being a great honor for the family, having a Rambouillet ram chosen as supreme champion was also a history making event.

"This is the first time a Rambouillet ram has ever won the supreme champion award at Louisville. Normally a meat breed of sheep will win more often than a wool breed," said Powell. "We were standing there and they were looking at him and we thought that it was really nice that they were considering a Rambouillet. And then they picked him. I was shocked!"

"We were shocked and happy at the same time," said Strausbaugh.

"I think a lot of time there are a lot of good wool breed sheep out there that sometimes get overlooked. It's a pleasant surprise when the judges do pick one," Powell said.

The Louisville supreme champion has recently been sold to Vern and Krys Schrom of Amenia, N.Y., who are just getting started in the sheep business.

"When you're just getting started," noted Strausbaugh, "buy the best ram and the best brood ewes you can afford. You need to start with good breeding stock."

Although the sale of the ram broke up their undefeated fall ram lamb team, the family is happy to sell breeding rams from their outstanding Rambouillet flock when they have the chance. They also keep their eyes open for new sires for their flock.

"We're always looking for a good stud ram," said Strausbaugh. "We went for four years before we could find a ram that we were satisfied with a while ago. We have four rams right now that we're using. We try to keep a good ram base so we don't get caught again."

Right now they run 100 total sheep with about 50 brood ewes. Their Rambouillets are mostly horned, but they do have a few polled sheep to market to people who prefer the polled rams. The family also keeps about 10 Shropshire ewes.

Right now, lambs are already

on the ground for consideration for next year's show. "We've had about 35 fall lambs and will be having lambs again in January, February, and March. Most are due in February," said Powell.

What's the secret to having champions? Strausbaugh noted that you have to get the lambs on the ground and get them growing.

"We try to feed as good of feed as we can to get the lambs growing and healthy," he said. "The other thing is figuring out which rams to breed to which lambs or ewes to try to get some consistency."

Although the supreme champion has been sold, Powells already have some of his offspring on the ground. In February, they expect to have some of their other champion ram's offspring born.

"It takes a while to see what will be your good lambs. You have to look at your growthiness. Later on, you can tell what kind of fleece they have on them," said Strausbaugh.

Each breed of sheep places different emphasis on different parts of the animal. The Rambouillet score card emphasizes conformation with 60 percent of the points with the type of fleece totaling 40 percent. Among meat breeds, the fleece may be only worth five to 10 percent.

"The difficulty in the Rambouillets is that you have to choose for good fleeces as well as size and scale and correctness. You're basically trying to put three different pieces of the puzzle together to get a good sheep," said Strausbaugh. "There are some sheep with good fleeces that aren't quite big enough and then you have some that are really big, but their fleeces aren't as nice."

At Powell Rambouillets, the emphasis has always been on fine fleece. Judges look for uniformity in the fleece and the diameter of each fiber. The thinner the diameter, the better the fleece.

"We save some of our nicer fleeces for some area hand spinners. I don't spin," said Powell. "I have a spinning wheel in the corner, but I don't have the time."

While Powell and Strausbaugh are away at the shows, Powell's sons, Rich and Geoff, man the farm. Powell's father, Kenneth Moore, who is 90 years old, still gets out every day to check on the sheep. In fact, he still owns four animals.

"My Dad always had horned Rambouillets and he always put a lot of emphasis on fleece. We've just continued with that," said Powell.

Access To Argentina Complete For U.S. Pork Producers

National Pork Producers Council President (NPPC) Craig Jarolimek announced recently that early in the new year, U.S. pork producers will have the opportunity to ship bone-in as well as boneless pork products to Argentina.

The Argentine market just recently opened to boneless pork exports from the U.S. Now, bone-in products from the U.S. will also be accepted. The Argentine market for imported pork is estimated at 30,000 metric tons a year.

While it will take time to build market share in Argentina, opening the market to U.S. pork is another victory in a worldwide effort to eliminate barriers to free trade.

"Step by step, we are making steady progress toward a world market for pork that is free of all tariff and non-tariff barriers," said Jarolimek, a pork producer from Forest River, N.D. "The U.S. pork market has been wide open for many years and everyone is free to compete openly with us. We practice and encourage open competition because we have confidence in the quality, consistency and value of U.S. pork."

Full approval for U.S. pork shipments to Argentina comes on the heels of direct meetings between Argentine officials, Jarolimek and other officials of NPPC and representatives from USDA. Jarolimek pointed out that U.S. pork producers are principled in their support for allowing sound science to determine whether a foreign product was safe for importation and expected Argentina to do the same.

Jarolimek thanked U.S. Trade Ambassador Charlene Barshefsky, Agriculture Secretary Glickman and members of Congress led by Sens. Charles Grassley (R-IA), Max Baucus (D-MT) and Rep. Doug Bereuter (R-NE) for their support in the effort to gain approval for U.S. pork shipments to Argentina. Jarolimek also said that USDA Under Secretary for Marketing and Regulatory Programs Isi Siddiqui deserved high praise for the time and effort he dedicated to the issue on behalf of U.S. producers.

Lehigh County Honors 4-H Members, Leaders

ALLENTOWN (Lehigh Co.) — About 200 friends and family gathered recently to honor Lehigh County 4-H volunteers and members for their achievements.

Betty Selig, Trexlertown, received a 4-H clover pin with a diamond chip for 40 years of service as a volunteer club leader with the Trexlertown Merry Stitches 4-H Club.

Six 4-H members were awarded plaques as outstanding 4-H'ers. Outstanding boy and girl (ages 8-10) were Paul Schappell of Schnecksville, member of the Seeing Eye Puppy 4-H Club, and Lorissa Lazarus of Breinigsville, member of the county sheep and swine clubs and the Country Cabbies 4-H Club.

Outstanding boy (ages 11-14) was Daniel Post, New Tripoli. He's a member of the Lowhill Laurels 4-H Club. The outstanding girl was Rachel Rennie, Center Valley. She's a member of the Southern Lehigh Helping Hands

4-H Club, the Veterinary Science 4-H Club, and County 4-H Teen Council.

Outstanding boy and girl (ages 15-18) were Harvey Emert, IV, Catasauqua, and Erin Lichtenwalner, Coplay. Both are members of the Neffs Cloverettes 4-H Club and County 4-H Teen Council. Erin is also a member of the Veterinary Science 4-H Club and has volunteered as a counselor at residential 4-H camp. Harvey and Erin will represent Lehigh County at the National 4-H Congress in November 2001. This year's delegates to National 4-H Congress — John C. Strawbridge, Whitehall, and Katie Harwick, Kempton — have just returned from Atlanta, Ga., where the event was held immediately following Thanksgiving.

Teen leaders who hold offices, teach projects, volunteer as camp counselors, or who help younger individual members were honored for years of service.

Those who completed one year of service were Jessie Graham, Philip Laube, and Rachel Laube, Coopersburg; Christopher Jameson and Robyn Wirth, Orefield; Amy Lenhart, Jenny Lenhart, Josh Minnich, Karley White, and Stephanie Wolfe, New Tripoli; Kristen Oplinger, Wescosville; Nick Reiss, Allentown; and Nicole Wirth, Emmaus.

Teens completing their second year of leadership were Seth Bleiler and Stacey Mangold, New Tripoli; Erin DiMiceli, Slatington; Jackie Federici, Orefield; Amy Goetz, Fogelsville; Katie Harwick and Suzanne Harwick, Kempton; Adam Rabenold and Tim Rabenold, Allentown; Rachel Rennie, Center Valley; and Nathan Wagner, Coplay.

John C. Strawbridge, Whitehall, and Josh Wagner, New Tripoli, have been teen leaders for three years. Erin Lichtenwalner, Coplay, and Harvey Emert, IV, Catasauqua, have completed four years of teen leadership.

Other 4-H adult volunteers who received pins for years of service were Cathy Dassler, Slatington, 15 years; Darlene Brosky, Zionsville, 10 years; and Dennis Haas, Orefield; Kris Rigler, Whitehall; and Kathy Smith, New Tripoli, all five years of service.

Those completing their first year as 4-H leaders were Julianne Anglestein, Bethlehem; Cheryl Bennecoff, Kutztown; Robin Carmody, Trexlertown; Maureen Krasnai, Zionsville; Sharon Mangold, New Tripoli; Kathy McGovern, Emmaus; Donna Nardo, Coopersburg; Robyn Oplinger, Wescosville; ceived plaques. They were president, Nicole Wirth, Seeing Eye Puppy 4-H Club; secretary, Katie Harwick, Lowhill Laurels 4-H Club; treasurer, Amy Lenhart, Neffs Cloverettes 4-H Club; and news reporter, Kristen Oplinger, Seeing Eye Puppy 4-H Club.

The Laurys Station 4-H Club won $25 for its outstanding club scrapbook. The Lowhill Laurels 4-H Club and the Lehigh County 4-H Equine Club won $25 each as outstanding 4-H clubs.

Maximize Milk Checks Without Expanding Dairy Operation

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Dairy farmers can increase their milk checks without expanding their herd. It just takes a little more management and some shopping around, said Tom Noyes, dairy agent at the Wayne County office of Ohio State University Extension.

There is probably an opportunity for some producers to gain at least an additional $1.50 per hundred pounds of milk produced, Noyes said.

And, with milk prices more than $1 per hundred pounds lower than normal, maximizing the milk check is more important now than ever, he said. The current All Milk Price — the base price of milk plus additions for butterfat, protein and other solids content — is about $12.50 per hundredweight. The average All Milk Price received by Ohio dairy farmers over the past 10 years is $13.76 per hundredweight.

"You can affect what your milk price is through management on the farm and looking at different marketing alternatives," he said. "You could gain $1 per hundredweight just by altering what you do on your farm."

Improving milk quality by lowering the somatic cell count and controlling other factors could make a noticeable difference. Somatic cells are animal body cells present at low levels in normal milk. High levels of these cells in milk — caused by things such as mastitis infection, udder injuries, stress, poor milking procedures and cow age — indicate abnormal, reduced-quality milk. Milk with a high somatic cell count has a shorter shelf life, yields less cheese and may have poor flavor, Noyes said.

In Federal Order 33, which includes Ohio, the milk price producers receive is adjusted up or down by how much their milk's somatic cell count is below or above 350,000 cells per milliliter. Milk below 350,000 cells per milliliter gets a premium, while milk above 350,000 is discounted.

"In Federal Order 33, about 53 percent of the milk produced has a somatic cell count between 201,000 and 400,000 cells per milliliter," Noyes said. "That means more than half of the milk produced is discounted or receives only a small bonus. Another 25 percent of the milk has counts worse than 400,000. So there is definitely room for improvement in gaining take home dollars through reducing somatic cell counts."

The premium amounts vary by market and can range from 10 cents per hundredweight to $1 per hundredweight. Additional bonuses often are paid for producing premium quality milk for consecutive months, he said. All quality programs also are based on milk being free of antibiotics, added water, low sediment and off flavors.

Based on the milk supply, some buyers may offer over order premiums. These are bonuses above the market price for milk within a federal order offered simply to secure milk for a buyer. They are not based on quality. The more competition there is for milk, the higher these bonuses may be, Noyes said. They often range from zero to 30 cents per hundredweight and vary by month.

Dairy farmers can adjust their production to take advantage of seasonal bonuses. These bonuses often occur in the fall when children are going back to school and demand for milk increases. The problem is, many producers often get their highest milk production in the spring, when grass and hay supplies flourish, but the school year is almost over. So finding ways to increase fall production could be beneficial, he said.

However, with expanding dairy herds, milk production across the United States is becoming more consistent throughout the year. So, seasonal bonuses have diminished and may not be around much longer, Noyes said.

Bonuses also exist for milk with high levels of protein. Some buyers are paying 10 cents per pound of protein in milk. Having a high protein dairy herd can add significantly to the bottom line, Noyes said.

"You have to shop around for the market that best suits your milk," he said. "And once the buyer who pays the best premium is found, producers have to be willing to change where they ship their milk, so they can get the best price possible. Ohio producers often are loyal and are hesitant to shift buyers. But, the decision should depend on the price."

20,000-pounds of milk per cow per year, an extra $1.50 per hundred pounds of milk produced would garner $30,000 of additional income per year.

By adjusting management practices, producers could probably obtain these bonuses with little or no added production costs, Noyes said. Just make sure barns are well ventilated, stalls are well bedded, the operation is clean, and proper milking techniques are followed.

"There is obviously additional money to be made by producing high quality milk and shopping around to find the market that will be to your advantage," he said.

Noyes shared these ideas with dairy farmers and other participants at the Ohio Dairy Management Conference, Dec. 4 in Columbus.

Glickman Announces New Forestry Council Members

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. Ag Secretary Dan Glickman has announced the selection of four members to the USDA National Urban and Community Forestry Advisory Council. There is one new member and three are reappointed. Their term begins Jan. 1, 2001 until Dec. 31, 2003.

The new member appointed to the 15-member council is Elizabeth Kinch, with the Derby Community Foundation, Derby, Kan.

Three members have been reappointed to serve a second term. They are: John Ball, associate professor of forestry, South Dakota State University, Brookings, S.D.; Dan DeWald, natural resources manager, City of Bellevue Parks and Community Services, Bellevue, Wash.; and Deborah Gangloff, executive director, American Forests, Tracy's Landing, Md. Gangloff will continue to serve as the chairwoman of the council.

"The experience these four members bring to the council will enhance USDA's efforts to protect and increase urban tree cover and heighten the importance of urban and community forestry initiatives throughout the nation," said Glickman.

The council advises the secretary concerning the care and management of trees, forests, and related natural resources in urban and community settings. The council also works with federal and state agencies and other partners to share information, technical assistance, and award competitive cost-share grants that advance the science and practice of urban forestry.

Corn Tested As Alternative Forage Crop For Cattle

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Four rows of corn in a field less than a mile from the Ohio State University campus has so far withstood rain, snow, wind, insects and wild animals. Two university researchers hope the crop is still standing come spring.

The "standing" corn is being tested as a potential alternative forage crop to extend the grazing season for cattle through the winter months. If successful, the practice of strip grazing could provide a cheap and convenient method for farmers to keep their cattle healthy. The project is part of a larger collaboration among researchers in Ohio, Iowa, Nebraska and Missouri to improve the profitability and productivity of the beef industry.

Dave Zartman, Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center project leader to the North Central Regional Committee for Ohio, hopes the corn will replace or augment standard winter grazing feed such as stockpiled fescue grass, which is difficult for cattle to reach through deep snow, and hay, which is more expensive than corn. The corn plus mineral supplement would also provide the energy and nutrient requirements that the cattle need.

Stockpiling feed through winter can also be expensive and inconvenient for the farmer when such factors as labor, hauling feed, storage and removal and equipment are taken into consideration. "Our goal is to make it worthwhile for the farmer to get away from those aggravations by having a crop that can be strip-grazed while stockpiling enough feed to make it through winter," said Zartman. "If we don't find a way to reduce production costs, farmers won't be able to keep up competitively."

Rhonda Gruber, graduate research associate with the Department of Animal Sciences, is studying how well the "standing" corn holds up to winter conditions, insects, wild animals, nutrient degradation and mold content. She said preliminary data have yielded positive results. "We've found very little mold, no insect or wild animal problems and only a few of the stalks have fallen over due to wind." The nutrient analysis had not yet been completed.

The study has so far yielded 70 to 100 bushels of grain per acre, more than the researchers had expected, with data to be compiled through March. "We expect to lose about half of the feed availability," said Gruber. "With what's still standing come March, we want to see how feasible it is to have such a practice available. We are then going to conduct livestock trials and study factors like management and consumption patterns."

Gruber said analyzing corn as an alternative forage crop has not been widely researched, which leaves many questions to be answered, such as what corn varieties best withstand winter conditions, how many head of cattle can be fed, and how much money a farmer would actually save, if any at all.

The researchers, however, do know that strip grazing does work. Farmers in Argentina allow cattle to feed on "standing" corn to recoup the costs lost when harvesting becomes too expensive. Zartman also said that strip grazing keeps cattle healthy because manure is distributed outside rather than in a barn and because the cattle live in the fresh air, cutting down on disease. Strip grazing may also help prevent animals from wasting feed and over eating.

... For New Construction Why Not Examine The "Chimtek Difference."

Chimtek Inner Liners are made of volcanic pumice and high-temperature refractory cements. Its round shape provides even temperature inside flue and contributes to efficient flow of smoke and flue gasses. The volcanic pumice in Chimtek liners adds considerable insulating value.

All three chimneyliner systems distributed by DS Machine Shop are of super design, super performance, and super value. With all their advantages these chimney systems often cost no more than ordinary chimneys. Write or call us for more specific liner information.

Sims Receives National Soil Science Award

NEWARK, Del. — Dr. J. Thomas Sims, professor of soil and environmental chemistry in the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources at the University of Delaware (UD), has received the Soil Science Applied Research Award from the Soil Science Society of America.

The award recognizes outstanding achievement in applying research principles to practical problems in soil science.

A national authority on soil testing and nutrient and waste management, Sims has developed and implemented environmentally sound soil and waste management programs for agriculture, industry, and municipalities.

In an ongoing effort to improve environmentally sound management practices, Sims has worked extensively with production agriculture to maximize yields while minimizing the environmental impact of nutrients on groundwater and surface waters. He has also explored environmentally efficient uses for agricultural, municipal, and industrial by-products as soil amendments.

As director of the UD Soil

Testing Program for 15 years, Sims has advocated the use of the latest advances in soil testing, and has conducted an active educational outreach program. He served as associate editor for the Journal of Environmental Quality from 1994 to 2000.

Sims was elected a Fellow by the American Society of Agronomy in 1995 and by the Soil Science Society of America in 1996. From 1991 to 1994, he served as president of the society's north-eastern branch, which presented him with the Outstanding Research Award in 1996. Sims is past chair of the Soil Science Society of America's division of soils and environmental quality.

On the faculty at UD since 1982, Sims teaches an undergraduate course in environmental soil management and soils and a graduate level course in advanced soil management. In addition to the Soil Science Society of America, Sims belongs to the American Society of Agronomy and the Soil and Plant Analysis Council.

Sims received his bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Georgia and a doctorate from Michigan State University.

Farming Forecast

A major winter storm will blast the Northeast this weekend, bringing a significant snowfall to our area with gusty winds, leading to intense blowing and drifting snow and white-out conditions. The heaviest snowfall is anticipated closer to the coast, but snowfall near Lancaster could top 10 inches through Saturday night. It will remain windy Sunday even though the storm will pull away.

Home on the Range

Whatever the occasion, especially during the holidays when family and friends gather, make guests feel special with an original approach to food and drink. Please the palate of the most discriminating guest with these unique appetizers and sparkling juice punches.

Whether you're planning for a small or large group, much of the preparation for these recipes can be done ahead of time, leaving you to spend time with your guests. Melba Shrimp Toasts offer up the zesty taste of red onion and hot pepper sauce with the elegance of shrimp. For an interesting mix of texture and taste, serve Brie and Brown Sugar Melba Toasts that combine the tastes of brie, Melba Toast and almonds with the sweetness of brown sugar. For a dessert-style appetizer, Mochaccino Raspberry Melba Bites will dazzle the taste buds with raspberry, coffee and chocolate flavors complemented by the mild taste and crisp texture of Melba Snacks.

Your holiday celebration would not be complete without serving the traditional punch. Add sparkle to yours this year with sparkling fruit juices. Sparkling Holiday Punch is easy to prepare and makes a stunning impression, especially when garnished with fruited ice rings. Sparkling Cranberry Spritzer is made in a pitcher and served in tall, ice-filled glasses. Garnish with skewered orange slices and maraschino cherries to make a festive, refreshing holiday quencher. Sparkling Company Punch takes a little more time and planning, but is well worth the effort.

For a festive presentation with little cost or effort, decorate your table with holiday plants, pieces of curled ribbon, colored confetti or candles in different sizes, shapes and colors. Add extra elegance by serving your recipe creations in crystal dishes and glassware, using colorful table runners and napkins to enhance the look.

Present your Melba Toast appetizers and sparkling juice punches in any combination to suit your taste. Together they bring delightfully unexpected and delicious flavors to all your holiday entertaining. Versatility and easy preparation make them perfect for a spur-of-the-moment celebration or a long-planned occasion that needs that "extra something." Remember, simplicity can be key to making your party memorable and enjoyable, not only for your guests—but yourself as well!

Melba Shrimp Toasts

- 1 can (4 1/4 oz.) small shrimp, drained (fresh or frozen shrimp may be substituted)
- 1/4 cup mayonnaise or low fat mayonnaise dressing
- 1/4 cup finely chopped celery
- 1/4 cup finely chopped red onion
- 1/8 teaspoon hot pepper sauce
- 12 melba toasts (approx. 1/2 box)

In medium bowl, combine shrimp, mayonnaise, celery, onion and pepper sauce. Spoon onto melba toasts. On microwaveable plate, microwave 6 at a time on High (100%) for 45 seconds or until heated through.

Makes 12 servings.

Brie and Brown Sugar Melba Toasts

- 8 ounce ripe Brie cheese, thinly sliced
- 2 tablespoon packed light brown sugar
- 1 to 2 tablespoon sliced almonds
- 12 melba toasts (approx. 1/2 box)

Place 1 thin slice Brie on melba toasts. Sprinkle with brown sugar and almonds. Place toasts on broiler pan. Broil 6 inches from source of heat until cheese begins to melt, about 1 minute.

Makes 12 servings.

Mochaccino Raspberry Melba Bites

- 4 ounce cream cheese
- 1 1/2 teaspoon chocolate syrup
- 1/2 teaspoon freeze-dried coffee granules
- 1/4 teaspoon sugar
- 1 package (5 1/4 oz.) white melba snacks squeezable raspberry fruit spread

In small bowl, stir cream cheese, chocolate syrup, coffee and sugar until smooth. Spoon 1/2 teaspoon cheese mixture onto melba snacks and top with 1/8 teaspoon raspberry spread.

Makes 48 servings.

Sparkling Holiday Punch

- 2 bottles sparkling white grape juice cocktail, chilled
- 1 can (11.5 oz.) frozen concentrated cranberry

- juice cocktail
- 3 cups cold water
- 3 cans (12 oz. each) ginger ale, chilled

In punch bowl, combine sparkling white grape juice, frozen concentrated cranberry juice cocktail and water. Gently stir in ginger ale. Float fruited ice ring made with sparkling juice and garnished with mint leaves. Serve immediately.

Makes about 30 1/2-cup servings.

Sparkling Cranberry Spritzer

- 1 can (11.5 oz.) frozen concentrated cranberry juice cocktail, thawed
- 3 cans (12 oz. each) club soda, chilled
- 2 bottles sparkling red or sparkling white grape juice cocktail, chilled
- orange slices
- maraschino cherries

In large pitcher, gently stir together cranberry juice cocktail concentrate and club soda. Add sparkling red or sparkling white grape juice cocktail. Serve immediately in ice-filled glasses garnished with skewered orange slices and maraschino cherries. Makes 12 8-oz. servings.

Sparkling Company Punch

- 3 cups of cold water
- 3/4 cups sugar
- 5 cinnamon sticks
- 1 bottle sparkling red or sparkling white grape juice cocktail, chilled
- 1 cup orange juice
- 1/2 cup lemon juice
- 3 bottles (16 oz. each) lemon-lime soda, chilled
- Ice cubes made with sparkling red or sparkling white grape juice cocktail

In medium saucepan, combine water, sugar and cinnamon sticks to make cinnamon syrup. Heat to boiling over medium heat, stirring occasionally. Reduce heat and simmer 5 minutes. Remove cinnamon sticks, cover and refrigerate two hours.

In a large punch bowl, combine cinnamon syrup, sparkling red or sparkling white grape juice cocktail, orange juice, lemon juice and soda. Add ice cubes. If desired, garnish punch with additional cinnamon sticks or float fruit-filled ice cubes, orange, lemon or lime slices.

Makes about 30 1/2-cup servings.

Plan A Special New Year's Eve At Home

Featured Recipes

Alternate Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Heidi Miller, also representing Dauphin County, enjoys promoting dairy products and making new friends.

She shares three of her favorite cheese ball recipes that she recommends using for your New Year's Celebration.

"They not only look good but taste good too," she said.

HOLIDAY CHEESE BALL

2 cups shredded cheddar cheese
1 tablespoon each pimento, green pepper, chopped onion
2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon lemon juice
Crushed pecans

Mix cheese and cream cheese together. Add pimento, green pepper, onion, Worcestershire sauce, and lemon juice. Mix well. Form into ball. Chill. Roll in chopped pecans before serving.

OLIVE CHEESE BALL

8-ounces cream cheese, softened
8-ounces blue cheese, crumbled
1/4 cup soft butter
2/3 cups chopped black olives
1 tablespoon minced chives or parsley
1/4 cup chopped English walnuts

Blend cream cheese, blue cheese, and butter. Add black olives and minced chives or parsley. Form into ball. Roll in nuts before serving.

DRIED BEEF LOG

8-ounces soft cream cheese
1/4 cup parmesan cheese, grated
1 tablespoon horseradish
1/4 cup chopped green olives
1 cup dried beef, finely cut

Blend together cream cheese, parmesan cheese, and horseradish. Stir in olives. Form into ball. Chill several hours. Roll in dried beef.

On no other night of the year is there so much pressure to "have fun" as New Year's Eve.

This attitude is what encourages so many people to drink to excess, make their way through large crowds of strangers at expensive gatherings, or in some way show others that, yes, they are indeed having the expected fun on New Year's Eve. The reality is that most people spend quiet evenings at home with family and friends and don't even see the clock strike midnight since it is past normal bedtime.

Here are some suggestions to help you enjoy a special New Year's Eve at home.

- Set the clocks ahead — if midnight seems to take forever to arrive and kids are tired. Set your clocks ahead one, two or even three hours so everyone can enjoy, celebrate, blow horns, bang pots and pans, and then get to bed at a reasonable hour so the next day is also enjoyable.

- Make a special non-alcoholic punch for everyone including the children to enjoy, use special glasses to add to the atmosphere.

Orange Smoothie

This non-alcoholic drink provides nutrients from milk as well as all the nutrients in a serving of orange juice.

6-ounce can frozen orange juice concentrate

1 cup milk, two percent fat
1 cup water

January

6 - Cooking With Oats
13 - Soups And Stews
20 - Using Yogurt
27 - Superbowl Ideas

2 tablespoons sugar
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
8 ice cubes

Place all ingredients in a blender. Cover and blend until smooth. Serve immediately.

Peachy Punch

Peaches add flavor and texture to this punch, a tasty treat without any alcohol.

16-ounce can sliced peaches, in light syrup

1 cup apple juice
1 tablespoon lemon juice
12-ounce bottle ginger ale

Chill ingredients thoroughly. Blend peaches and syrup until smooth. Add apple and lemon juices, blend; and remove blender jar from power unit. Add ginger ale; mix well. Serve immediately.

Make your own seltzer beverages. They have more nutrition than a flavored seltzer water when made with fruit juice and no added sugar. For example, try 2 tablespoons of frozen orange juice concentrate mixed with 1 cup of seltzer.

Play the games you or your children received for Christmas, or go back to old standards such as Charades.

On individual slips of paper, write such things as: the funniest thing that happened to me this year; the most embarrassing; the weirdest; the scariest, and so forth.

Have each person pick a slip of paper, take a few minutes to think about it, and then everyone shares his or her experience.

Take out the pictures you took over the past year and organize! Talk about them with family and friends while dating, labeling and organizing. Send any duplicates to family members out of town, or make individual scrapbooks for each person. The purpose is to enjoy the photos, remember why you took them, and share the memories with others.

Take the time to reflect on the past year, what you are thankful for and how you have grown as an individual.

With family and friends, set some goals for next year — make a point to include "having more fun" to your list and come up with places to see, people you want to visit, and things you want to do.

Write down your goals and keep them where they can be seen. Remember to set priorities, be thankful for what you have, and anticipate the new year as another grand adventure in life.

On Being a Farm Wife (and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

Time to salute a new year.

Time to turn a chapter, start anew, resolve to clean up our act. Time to clean up this messy desk, scattered with clippings. Clippings which keep tangling themselves in my mind, like they do among the stuff on the desk.

"Gas mileage at 20-year low," intones one reporting on our national obsession with driving vehicles the size of houses. Another laments the skyrocketing cost of home heating fuel, clipped to one printed just last week of a funds-scarce family chopping down trees in the yard to use for heat. Mingled in are blurbs on farmland preservation efforts, along with a recent one relating to preserve farmers, if we're going to preserve farmland. And a couple more report ordinance strategies aimed at preventing "corporate" (read, large) farming in numerous municipalities of the region.

Unrelated stuff? Not in my opinion. They're indicative of two lynchpin national policies which have helped grease our booming economy of the past three-plus decades. Cheap fuel. And cheap food.

So we've happily bopped along these years, driving increasing bigger, fuel-hogging vehicles to ever-larger homes located farther and farther from the urban centers where we work, shop, and do business. And we've paved over more farm fields with concrete and blacktop so we can get there and back faster.

Meanwhile, remaining farms battle increasing economic pressure to continue producing cheap food with evermore constraints of size and regulation and taxes to help fund the growth and to battle issues raised by a population on the move into their back 40, spurred by this economy nourished by cheap fuel and cheap food.

To stay in business, remaining farmers are urged by economists to get bigger, to be more efficient, to maximize their resources, to specialize and grow, to diversify and grow. But efforts to grow their farm businesses are increasingly thwarted by the sprawl feeding from cheap fuel and cheap food, tossing roadblocks out to halt growth and size.

Farmers, frustrated with low returns from cheap food and increasing population pressures, wear out, sell out, and move out. Remaining ones responding to encouragement to get bigger for efficiency may then find themselves battling legal, regulatory and municipal strangleholds for being "corporate," or "too big."

Food production shifts farther away, where there are fewer people, fewer rules, fewer regulations. Also fewer markets, fewer processing. Which means that cheap food has to be trucked to where people are to eat it.

Requiring more and better highways. More fuel to get it to markets. More labor in a shrinking labor pool to move it.

Does this make sense?

Suppose...just suppose...

someone in a position to make such decisions decided this will be the year to get serious about weaning us from cheap, imported oil. Serious enough to implement an energy policy prioritizing use of fuels from the renewable resource of farm-produced grain.

Suppose...just suppose...that such a grain-based fuel shift had a major impact on raising farm-commodity prices from their present 20-year lows. Suppose that if grain commodities became truly profitable, farmland loss would drastically slow. We might be able to get serious about preserving both farmland and the farmers who till it.

Suppose...just suppose...senior citizens might not have to face the prospect of choosing between buying fuel or buying food and medicine. A single father struggling to make ends meet to provide for his kids might not have to chop down the trees on his lawn for heat. A nervous, shaky economy would calm down. Sales for cottage-sized, 4WD, SUV's might even pick up again.

Suppose such a policy could ultimately make us independent of the squabbling sultans and sheiks of the desert oil cartel, while boosting our farm economy. Now, wouldn't that be a New Year's resolution worth making?

OK, these clippings have messed with my mind long enough. Into the trash with 'em.

Information On Housing For Elders

ITHACA, N.Y. — As people grow older, their life styles and housing needs change. Some choose to live independently, while others may need assistance with some aspects of daily living. A new bulletin from the Northeast Regional Agricultural Engineering Service, Housing As We Grow Older, NRAES-41, provides valuable information to help older people explore different options and make decisions about their housing and personal needs.

The 46-page publication covers six major topics: choices for independent living; choices for supportive living; designing the physical environment; moving to smaller, efficient housing; community support services; and home financial decisions. Each chapter describes available options in-depth and guides people through a decision-making process. Also included is an evaluation form which lists questions to ask when visiting supportive housing facilities.

Housing As We Grow Older is available for $7 per copy, plus shipping and handling and sales tax. The shipping and handling charge is $3.75 for a single copy within the continental United States. New York residents, add eight percent sales tax (calculated on both the cost of the publication and shipping and handling charges). If ordering more than one copy or if ordering from outside the U.S., please contact NRAES for shipping rates. Orders from outside the U.S. must be prepaid in U.S. funds. Major credit cards are accepted, and checks should be made payable to NRAES. For information about quantity discounts, or for a free publications catalog, contact NRAES by phone at (607) 255-7654, by fax at (607) 254-8770, or by e-mail at nraes@cornell.edu.

trients. A good example of this is iron, which is a common nutrient deficiency for children and menstruating women. Iron supplements should be taken with a meal or a glass of juice since the acid produced in the stomach as a result of food entering it or the acid naturally occurring in juice increases the absorption of iron into the bloodstream.

It's best to avoid drinking coffee or tea for at least 90 minutes after taking an iron pill or eating an iron-rich meal. Chemicals called polyphenols in coffee and tannins in tea have been found to decrease the absorption of iron. Since calcium may reduce iron absorption, avoid taking a multi-vitamin/mineral supplement at the same time as a separate calcium pill. Instead, take them with different meals.

What Is The Best Calcium Supplement

For those taking a calcium supplement, select one with calcium carbonate, since it is best absorbed when taken with meals. Because the body is not able to absorb large doses as well as it does small doses of calcium, it's a good idea to divide large doses (1,000 to 1,200 milligrams per day) into three smaller doses throughout the day. In addition, if you are not receiving enough sunlight on your skin, you may not be producing enough vitamin D, which is crucial in the absorption of calcium.

This is especially a concern for those living in the northeastern part of the U.S. and those who are home-bound. Those who don't expose themselves to the sun should purchase a calcium supplement that contains 200 to 400 milligrams of vitamin D for every 1,000 milligrams of calcium.

How Are Seniors' Needs Different

An estimated 20 percent of people older than 60 and 40 percent of people older than 80 have atrophic gastritis, a disorder in which acid is not sufficiently produced in the stomach. This can lead to inadequate absorption of those minerals that require acid to be present in the stomach.

For those older than 60 years, to maximize the absorption of a mineral such as calcium, take the supplement with meals. Or purchase calcium citrate supplements, which are better absorbed by those with atrophic gastritis. Be aware that calcium citrate pills have less calcium per pill; therefore, you will need to take more pills, which may result in more expense.

Those with atrophic gastritis may also have difficulty absorbing vitamin B12, a nutrient important in the formation of red blood cells. For those older than 50, it's recommended to take a supplement containing two to four micrograms of vitamin B12 per day or to eat vitamin B12 fortified cereal daily. The vitamin B12 found in supplements can be absorbed whether stomach acid is present or not.

How Effective Are The More Expensive Supplements?

They're not! While timed release capsules are more expensive, they are not necessarily better. Those advertising timed release supplements promote the importance of maintaining a constant level of vitamins and minerals in the bloodstream. Since this is not important, as it is for medications such as antibiotics, don't spend the extra money for timed release.

When searching through the shelves for a vitamin/mineral supplement, simply look for one with a USP symbol and one that contains no more than 100 percent of the recommended daily allowance (RDA) for all vitamins and minerals.

The presence of the USP symbol indicates the product has been tested to disintegrate and dissolve so it can be easily absorbed. It also means that the purity and potency meet established standards.

Vitamins C And E — Natural Or Synthetic?

Spending extra money on the natural form of vitamin C is not necessary. On the other hand, research has revealed that the natural form of vitamin E (d-alpha tocopherol) is better absorbed. In fact, the natural form has been found to be twice as strong as the synthetic (laboratory made) form (dl-alpha tocopherol).

Research indicates that 100 to 400 International Units (I.U.) per day can help fight heart disease and enhance your immune system.

So purchasing and taking a vitamin/mineral supplement is not as easy as it once seemed. However, research in this area has lead to interesting information, which will help you to get the most from your supplement and your dollar.

Looking Back, Looking Ahead

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — New Year's is traditionally a day to reflect on the events of the past year and set resolutions for the upcoming year. The good and the bad are left behind and the New Year greeted with expectation and some uncertainty.

Some years are better than others, and some offer more potential. No one knows exactly what the year 2001 holds, despite the best laid plans.

For some, the new year may bring unexpected pleasure and for others unwarranted pain.

Several of the people we profiled in the past, share their highlights from the year 2000, its frustrations, and expectations for the future.

Bob Loy

Remember Bob Loy? He organized a fundraiser that garnered more than $10,000 for cancer research. The story of the Loy family and the on-the-farm fundraiser in Schuylkill County appeared in the Sept. 23 issue of this paper.

Loy's upbeat philosophy in battling bladder and prostate cancer is remarkable. He sees every day as an opportunity to do something for someone else and has spread happiness into many corners.

But those happy molecules Loy was counting on to destroy the cancer within haven't been as successful as he hoped. In upcoming weeks Loy is lined up for 30 radiation treatments and ongoing hormone treatment to aid in his personal battle against the disease.

Nonetheless, Loy said that he plans to continue his positive outlook by facing one day at a time.

"I don't look too far into the future, but this past year the highlights were the fundraiser and my daughter's wedding," he said.

Peg Kreider

Some troubles can't be avoided, but Peg Kreider and husband Rick seemingly volunteered for the challenges they faced recently. In June, the Kreiders added a special-needs baby to their family of three natural-born and two adopted children. The Kreiders have also served as foster parents to more than 20 children during the past 12 years.

"But it has always been in my heart to reach out to a special-needs baby," Peg said.

Born four months premature, the little girl celebrated her first birthday the day after Christmas. The medically needy child is on oxygen full time, attached to a heart monitor, needs eye surgery to prevent blindness, and battles constant ear infections and many other illnesses. She cannot sit up unattended and her intellectual prognosis is uncertain.

"But all the children love her to pieces," Peg said. "She is so happy when she's feeling well that it compensates for all those sleepless nights we face in caring for her."

The biggest challenge Peg sees looming ahead is teaching their soon-to-be 16-year-old daughter to drive.

Betty Light

For years, Betty Light, Lebanon, has consistently sent recipes to Lancaster Farming to be published on the pages of "Home On The Range" and "Cook's Question Corner." But for the past several months, not a word has been received from Betty. Many readers have inquired about her.

According to a relative, Betty has been confined to nursing care. However, she would enjoy mail. If you are a reader who has benefited from one of Betty's recipes or from one of her crafty ideas, send her a card at 1785 Quarry Rd., Lebanon, PA 17046.

Kraft Family

Keeping everyone out of the hospital is the goal Mary Jo Kraft would like to see in 2001.

A week before Christmas, her husband George fell off a ladder. He hasn't been able to work and continues hospital testing to determine internal injuries.

Adding to that, his mother was hospitalized with a life-threatening illness, and the family spent days and nights of Christmas week by her hospital bedside.

George's dad had died on a previous Christmas Eve, making the family a bit jittery about the state of events.

On the whole, the year had been an exciting one for the Kraft family. Daughter Rijelle was named Pennsylvania Poultry Ambassador, National 4-H Congress representative for the state, a 4-H exchangee to Colorado, a national merit scholar, and attained numerous other achievements.

"I'm really excited about being accepted at Virginia Tech," Rijelle said of her college choice.

Rijelle and her mom present embryology projects at York County schools.

"One of the year's highlights was seeing an increase in schools' embryology projects," said Mary Jo, the 4-H assistant for York County.

Another great success was the Fresh From The Farm Camp conducted by the York County Extension. The camp is open to nonfarm youth to spend three days and nights in a farm environment where they are assigned chores and visit several types of farms.

On the final day, students participate in a Jeopardy-like program to determine how much knowledge they have gained in understanding the farm to the table concept.

"I want to continue working with the nonfarming community to teach them the importance of agriculture in life," Mary Jo said.

"Farm safety is another subject of critical importance to me. I have lost several (4-H) kids to tractor rolls and I don't want to lose anymore. They are near and dear to my heart," Mary Jo said.

Renee Blatt

After a year of achievement, Christmas Eve brought a devastating loss to Pennsylvania Honey Queen Renee Blatt.

The farmhouse of the family farm that had been in her family for more than 100 years was heavily damaged by fire.

Renee said that she and her brother were just finishing dairy-ing chores when they noticed

(Turn to Page B7)

Bob Loy organized a cancer research fundraiser on the farm. In facing an ongoing battle against cancer, Loy maintains a positive attitude by living one day at a time.

Pennsylvania Honey Queen Renee Blatt will compete for the national crown Jan. 15. Although successful in so many endeavors, Renee said dealing with so many events in life over which she has no control has been difficult since she is a highly organized person.

For many years, Betty Light, Lebanon, has faithfully sent in recipes and creative craft ideas. In recent months, many readers have asked why they no longer see her name in print. According to a relative, Betty is in nursing care and no longer able to write but loves to receive mail. Write to Betty Light at 1785 Quarry Rd., Lebanon, PA 17046.

Looking Back, Looking Ahead

Since the Kreider family was featured in the May 13 issue of this paper, a special needs baby has joined this Lancaster County family. The whole family has rallied around the baby girl who celebrated her first birthday Dec. 26. Their goal is to help her learn to sit up and overcome the many physical and mental challenges she faces.

smoke coming from the farmhouse, which is rented to tenants. Renee broke into the house and the fire company was called.

The fire began when two cats knocked over two oil lamps that were left burning while the tenants were away. Although no one was hurt, little is salvageable from the house.

"I feel sad for the tenants, and it's a big loss to us," said Renee, who hopes to continue farming the family farm.

A week ago, Renee received an associates' degree in marketing and small business. Renee looks forward to an internship with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture Bureau of Market Development.

Also exciting is Jan. 15, when Renee competes for the national honey queen title in San Diego, Calif. If she is crowned, she will travel across the states representing the beekeeping industry.

"It's been wonderful meeting so many people and learning so much about the beekeeping industry," Renee said.

The year has also been challenging for Renee, who is highly organized but couldn't plan the details for her future because of the many events over which she has no control.

"I definitely want to farm, work in some type of ag industry, and get married," she said.

So, it's goodbye 2000 and hello to the New Year, destined to bring joys, challenges, and surprises, despite the best-laid plans.

Although the family of Pennsylvania Poultry Ambassador Rijelle Kraft celebrated her many accomplishments this past year, the Christmas holidays held no time for celebrations. Instead the family spend days and nights in the hospital where Rijelle's grandmother is critically ill.

If you are looking for a recipe but can't find it, send your recipe request to Lou Ann Good, Cook's Question Corner, in care of Lancaster Farming, P.O. Box 609, Ephrata, PA 17522. There's no need to send a self-addressed stamped envelope. If we receive an answer to your question, we will publish it as soon as possible. Check your recipe to make sure you copy the right amounts and complete instructions for making the recipe. Sometimes we receive numerous answers to the same request, but cannot print each one.

Answers to recipe requests should be sent to the same address. You may also e-mail questions and answers to lgood.eph@lnpnews.com

Notice: Several readers write that they have problems accessing this address. The common mistake is that readers are substituting an "i" for the lowercase "l (L)" needed in two places. If you are having problems reaching this address, please check to make sure you are typing a lowercase "l (L)" in both places and not a lower or uppercase "i" or "I."

QUESTION — A reader would like a recipe for chocolate filled cookies and for raspberry filled cookies like they make at Bird-In-Hand Bake Shop. The raspberry filled have a buttery flavor on the outside with a smooth raspberry filling. The chocolate have a chocolate chip outside with a fudge-like filling.

QUESTION — In the Dec. 2 issue, a recipe for Mincemeat Bars from Katherine Wagner was printed. However, the measurement for butter was not included. Katherine, please let us know the amount of butter required for the recipe, as several readers have inquired about it.

QUESTION — Carrie Sponseller, Gettysburg, requests a recipe to make homemade pot pie to dry and store until needed.

QUESTION — Em Snyder, Red Lion, would like a recipe to make venison sweet bolgona. How long does it need to hang before smoking and how long should it hang before using?

QUESTION — Lorraine Nash, Mainesburg, wants a recipe to make gummies that taste like gummie bears.

QUESTION — Dotty Gaul, Douglassville, writes that when she was growing up in the Harrisburg area during the 1950s, her family went to the Blue Parasol, a drive-in restaurant with curb service. They served pork barbecue sandwiches with no tomato sauce but with relish. She thinks it was pork simmered in chicken broth with some other ingredients. Does anyone have a recipe that sounds similar to what Dotty describes?

QUESTION — Linda Smith, Walpole, N.H., would like the recipe for the starter to make fruitcake in which the fruit ferments in the jar. She has the fruit part of the recipe but not the starter.

QUESTION — A reader would like a recipe for chicken croquettes, which taste similar to those served by Shady Maple Smorgasbord.

QUESTION — Since October is Popcorn Popping Month, N. Kring, Somerset County, would like a recipe for kettle corn, which is a sweetened, salted popcorn sold at county fairs and festivals.

QUESTION — A reader requested an old recipe for clear bean soup made with fresh pork.

ANSWER — Faye Milwid, Delta, requested a recipe for pumpkin orange chiffon pie. Here's two recipes from "The Best of the Pumpkin Recipes Cookbook," edited by Helen and Emil Dandar.

Pumpkin Chiffon Pie

1 package Knox gelatin
¼ cup cold water
1¼ cups pumpkin
½ cup milk
3 eggs, separated
½ teaspoon each ginger, cinnamon, and nutmeg
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup sugar, divided
9-inch baked pie shell

In a double boiler, beat egg yolks slightly adding ½ cup sugar, pumpkin, milk, salt, and spices. Cook 10-15 minutes until thickened. Soften gelatin in water, add to mix. Blend well and cool. When mixture begins to thicken, fold in stiffly beaten egg whites with ½ cup sugar added. Pour into pie shell and chill. Top with cream.

Pumpkin Orange Pie

1½ cups pumpkin
3 tablespoons maple syrup
1 cup evaporated milk
6-ounce can frozen orange concentrate, thawed
2 beaten eggs
¾ cup sugar
1½ teaspoon cinnamon
1½ teaspoon pumpkin spice
½ teaspoon salt

In bowl, beat in one at a time the above items, stirring until smooth. Spoon into 9-inch unbaked crust. Bake 15 minutes at 350 degrees, reduce heat to 350 degrees and bake 40 minutes. Cool. Serve with whipped topping and crushed walnuts.

ANSWER — A. Guidas wanted old-fashioned recipes for soups and chilies and pumpkin funnel cakes. Here is a recipe, but send in more for soups and chilies and if you have a different one for funnel cakes.

Pumpkin Fritters

1 egg
½ cup sugar
Dash salt
1½ cups pumpkin
1 cup flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon ginger
1 tablespoon melted butter

In bowl, beat egg, sugar, salt and pumpkin. Stir in remaining ingredients. Drop batter by tablespoons into 1-inch deep oil at 375 degrees. Makes 1½ dozen.

ANSWER — A reader wanted a recipe on how to can cooked and blended pumpkin. Thanks to Nancy Wiker for sending these directions from Penn State Extension.

Canned Pumpkin And Winter Squash

Quantity: An average of 16 pounds pumpkin or winter squash is needed per canner load of 7 quarts; an average of 10 pounds is needed per canner load of 9 pints.

Quality: Pumpkins and squash should have a hard rind and stringless, mature pulp of ideal quality for cooking fresh. Small size pumpkins make better products.

Procedure: Wash, remove seeds, cut into 1-inch-wide slices and peel. Cut flesh into 1-inch cubes. Boil 2 minutes in water. Caution: Do not mash or puree. Fill jars with cubes and cooking liquid, leaving 1-inch headspace. Adjust lids and process in dial-gauge canner pressure at 11 pounds or with a weighted gauge pressure canner at 10 pounds for 55 minutes, pints, or 90 minutes quarts.

When ready to make pies, drain jars, strain or sieve cubes.

Beef Industry To Kick Off National Nutrition Advertising Burst

DENVER, Colo. — The beef industry will once again run a national advertising burst of its "Beef. It's What's For Dinner" campaign in support of nutrition on cable and network television and in print starting January 1. The ads will be targeted to women ages 25-54, and be seen by more than 50 million women an average of 5.5 times during the month.

Coordinated by the National Cattlemen's Beef Association for the Cattlemen's Beef Board, the campaign reinforces the fact that women can feel good about eating and serving beef, because not only does it taste great, it has the nutrients she needs. The burst will precede a national burst that focuses on convenience in February.

"The timing of this burst coincides with the new year, as many people are making resolutions during this time," according to Paige Miller, director of marketing communications for the National Cattlemen's Beef Association. "Women in this age group need to understand that beef can fit wonderfully with balanced, healthy diets."

Consumers will see television spots on such cable networks as Food TV, Arts & Entertainment, Lifetime and Home & Garden. The ads will also appear on ABC's "Good Morning America" and "All My Children", as well as syndicated programs such as "Martha Stewart Living," "Wheel of Fortune" and "Rosie O'Donnell."

The magazine effort will showcase beef's nutrition message in 22 national magazines that will hit the newsstands in January, including Parents, Good Housekeeping, Health, Country Home, Cooking Light, Glamour, People and TV Guide.

Gallup research shows that efforts to improve consumer perception of beef have been successful. The percentage of consumers who believe that beef contains important nutrients has increased by 11 points since October 1999, while the percentage of consumers who believe the nutrients in beef are important to teens and children has increased by 10 points. And since last October, the percentage of consumers who believe beef is an important part of a balanced diet has increased by nine percent.

Re-Inventing The Potato

DENVER, Colo. — "Re-inventing the Potato," is both the title of the National Potato Promotion Board's newly published retail report and its program goal. "This industry has been treating potatoes as a commodity," said Tim O'Connor, president and chief executive officer of the board. "We must break out of that mentality and assign more value to our crop."

By way of illustration, he points to the benchmarking portion of the retail report, documenting how potatoes are frequently sold at deep discounts, even during holidays when consumers are obviously going to buy them. On the other hand, consumers report their purchase decisions are driven by quality, type (for specific meals), and new menu ideas, not usually price.

The board recommends a new approach, a "segmentation strategy" based on consumer needs. "Visualize a four-level pyramid with your 'specialty,' gourmet and trendy potatoes on top with the highest prices," said Jon Brownell, chairman of the board's marketing committee. Next is the "premium" section for the consumer who wants the best quality. Shippers can deliver this quality in several ways, such as tighter sorting for loose and smaller bags with uniform potatoes.

Consumers have told us they will pay more for higher quality," says Brownell. "Why are we (as an industry) leaving this money on the table?"

The next two levels of the pyramid are "mainstream," all varieties in five-pound bags for consumers shopping for specific menus, and the "bargain bag" section for price-conscious shoppers.

Brownell says one reason he believes this approach is the correct one is that all potato shippers can find ways to move product up the pyramid by adding value and commanding higher prices.

Implementing this strategy will require investment; investment by retailers to change their pricing and discounting practices, and investment by growers and shippers to create higher quality offerings. For this approach to succeed, O'Connor emphasizes, retailers, growers and shippers must receive a return on their investments.

The board's "segmentation strategy," along with updated packaging, cross merchandising in other departments and new layouts for the potato section of the produce department are currently being tested. Results of work to date, plus consumer meal planning, shopping, and eating profiles, will become part of a potato category toolkit for retailers and shippers.

The toolkit, scheduled for winter completion, is an important first step in creating a consumer-directed marketing approach for potatoes, but is definitely not the final word. New promotional concepts will be developed, tested and refined as the marketplace and consumer trends change.

For more details or to work with the board on this strategy, contact the board's vice president of marketing, Mac Johnson, at (303) 873-2312.

Notes To Dad

ON BEING A STEPDA

Being a father today is hard enough, but many men are also dealing with being the "wicked stepparent."

Today about 10 percent of children in America younger than 18 live in stepfamilies. That means we have an awful lot of men out there trying to sort out their roles in an "instant family" or blended family situation — not an easy task!

Sometimes being a stepparent feels like being the "odd man out." Dads can feel left out of the mother-child relationship. Or children can resist the idea of the stepfather playing any parenting role due to the relationship with or loyalty to the biological father. It is a very complex situation for sure.

Dave, a stepdad of about seven years, stresses the need for patience. He said, "I was lucky because we were able to move into a different house when my wife and I married. We avoided the image of me trying to take over the biological father's place in the home. I would have felt like I was intruding by sitting at his place at the table, parking my car in his spot, etc. The move was like starting fresh, and I'm sure it helped our relationship from the beginning." This move created a neutral territory for the family and contributed to the good relationship they now enjoy.

Patience is certainly important and parents should realize that the first few months, or even years, will have difficult periods. You simply can't expect instant love.

Another stepdad I know said he was "careful not to try to 'elbow in' on the territory of the biological dad." In his case, his stepson and biological father had a strong common interest in fishing. "I stayed away from that activity and instead introduced my stepson to one of my passions, archery. Not only has it expanded Tim's horizons, but has given us a non-threatening activity that we both look forward to on weekends together."

Stepparenting is usually more successful if stepparents carve out a role for themselves like this that is different from and does not compete with the biological parents.

Discipline is often a big area of conflict. It's important to set limits and enforce them for children. The parent and stepparent need to work out disciplinary ac-

Redcoats Target National Energy Policy

TRENTON, Neb. — A voice from the heart of farm county resounded throughout the national convention of Women Involved in Farm Economics (WIFE) as delegates gathered in Colorado Springs, Colo., Nov. 15-18.

WIFE's strong grassroots heritage, a belief in the importance of the family farm, and the right of farm families to receive a fair tions in advance and then support each other when the rules are being enforced.

There are many obstacles, for sure, when working out stepparenting roles. Dads and moms need to accept the fact that a stepfamily is a different type of family. They also have to recognize that many of the upsetting behaviors they may see result from feelings of insecurity and loss on the child's part. They need to remind themselves of this and keep themselves from reacting to the words or behavior.

Finally, don't take all the responsibility for the relationship if it's less than perfect. Children have responsibility, too. There are two people involved in any relationship and stepparents shouldn't shoulder all the guilt. Like any relationship, the stepdad/stepchild relationship needs lots of open communication and time.

As my friend Dave says, "learning your role as a stepdad is just like learning to play any sport. Things feel a little awkward at first and you may not have the greatest form in the beginning. But if you keep trying, sooner or later it seems a little more natural and before you know it, you'll feel like you've always been a player!"

return for their efforts and dedication was emphasized by President Cindy Cruea during her opening address.

WIFE is entering its 25th year as one of the nation's leading farm organizations. This group of dedicated farm women has continuously addressed their concerns, which so gravely affect the economic well-being of this country.

"WIFE was a pioneer in promoting the use of ethanol, thus reducing the nation's dependency on foreign oil," said Cruea. "Promoting a cleaner environment and expanding the use of our domestic farm products for use in production of renewable fuels continues to be a major priority."

When WIFE was organized in 1976 in Sidney, Neb., ethanol promotion was a driving force. Twenty-five years later, the promotion of renewable fuels continues to be a leading issue for the organization.

"WIFE urges Congress and the Administration to develop a comprehensive National Energy Plan that includes renewable fuels," said Cruea.

Drought, high fuel prices, and low commodity prices are among the major factors in the economic dilemma facing this nation's farmers and ranchers.

"I am thankful that the Washington administration is aware of the mental, physical and spiritual stress that farm families are facing," said Cruea. "However, I believe our proud farmers and ranchers would much rather improve their financial situation through their own investments, management decisions, determination and dedication." Cruea calls on this nation's producers to encourage the use of renewable fuels.

"Join us as we fight for family farmers and ranchers and become a 'Redcoat for American Agriculture.'"

The "Redcoats" leading the organization in 2001 include Cindy Cruea, president, Pierre, S.D.; Mary Ann Sheppard, first vice-president, Shorter, Ala.; Pat Jones, second vice-president, Lubbock, Texas; Colleen Rottman, secretary, Yoder, Wyo.; and Ardyth Triplett, treasurer, Venango, Neb. National area directors are Kathy Herdt, Veteran, Wyo.; Norma Hall, Elmwood, Neb.; and Ella Caraway, Louisville, Ala.

Farm Injuries Builds Frustration Among Farm Safety Specialists

MARSHFIELD, Wis. — The number of traumatic, gruesome farm injuries involving young children is causing frustration among professionals involved in farm safety and health. During September and October there were media reports in North Dakota and Wisconsin of two children killed and three with limb amputations; the oldest of these kids was 9-years-old.

Having grown up on a farm 15 miles north of Marshfield, Wisconsin, Nancy Esser has an appreciation for how positive farm life is for families and children. But in the last two months, she's become aware of several serious injuries, including deaths, that have occurred on farms.

"It bothers me terribly to see these events described as 'accidents,'" said Ms. Esser. "They are not accidents. They are predictable and preventable."

These recent events, coming on the heels of National Farm Safety and Health Week, led to multiple phone and e-mail conversations among many child safety advocates and farm safety specialists. Esser and others are feeling righteous anger as they question why children have been near dangerous farm equipment.

In other work settings, such as construction, no one would ever allow a child to be around heavy equipment, yet that same standard is not always maintained around a farm.

"Ninety percent of all farm injuries are predictable and preventable," says Gail Scherweit, safety coordinator at the North Dakota Farm Bureau and Progressive Farmer Advisory Board member.

Gail notified Esser of the 3-year-old North Dakota boy who lost both arms in a grain auger. Esser said that they had communicated back and forth via telephone and e-mail about this incident and others similar to it.

"Our frustrations were mirrored when we read statements claiming that this was 'just an accident and no one is to blame.' We are looking at strategies to inform critical audiences that farm injuries are not just 'accidents.' An accident is something that can't be prevented. Most of the incidents which result in injury and death can be prevented by parents making better choices," Esser said.

John Shutske, Minnesota Extension Safety Specialist, described his sense of anger, frustration and hopelessness over these events. "Working in farm safety, we often walk on eggshells. We're careful not to offend farmers with talk about labor laws or child care options." John's hope is that more tough, straight talk among farmers, rural leaders and safety specialists will lead to the conclusion that "enough is enough!"

Barbara Lee, Ph.D., Children's Center Director, welcomes these frank discussions. "Having met with parents who have lost a child as a result of a farm injury, it is evident there can be long-term, negative consequences for the family. And as safety professionals, we often feel ineffective. We want to console parents on the loss of a child, but we cannot condone decisions such as allowing children on tractors, which resulted in one of the recent deaths. We've heard of cases where a district attorney has filed criminal child neglect charges against parents, whose lack of supervision or choice of risky behavior resulted in a child's death. We hate to see it come to that," she said.

So You Want to Be...

You see and hear about professional athletes every day...whether it's basketball or tennis players, golfers, skaters or race-car drivers. The job may sound like a lot of fun, but it's a lot of work, and not many people make it to the professional level.

A professional athlete is one who gets paid for participating in a sport. In order to continue being pro, athletes have to keep fans and team management happy by playing well and winning.

Professional athletes work hard, and they must stay in great shape. Along with playing and practicing during their sport's season, they have to stay in shape during the off-season, too. Athletes practice two to three hours a day during the season. They also go to meetings and watch films to learn more about the competition. Those who are involved in team sports have rules about when they have to be home and what they can and cannot do outside of the sport.

Being a pro athlete also can be stressful. Athletes risk getting hurt every time they are involved in a sport, and some injuries can end their careers. Athletes who play on a team can be traded, and that sometimes means they have to move to a new city.

If you are interested in becoming a pro, you need to get involved in a sport at an early age. Most pro athletes played high school and college sports. And in order to be involved in sports in school, you have to get good grades.

Celebrate

No. It has nothing to do with the sport of boxing. Boxing Day is actually a holiday celebrated in Great Britain, Australia, New Zealand and Canada.

Boxing Day is usually celebrated December 26, however, if December 26 falls on a Saturday or Sunday, it's celebrated the following Monday.

Although it is celebrated in countries around the world, it's not known when or how Boxing Day was actually started. The tradition may have started between the 400s and 1500s with the lords and ladies of England giving their servants presents in boxes the day after Christmas. Or, it may have started with priests taking money from the charity boxes the day after Christmas and then giving the money to the poor.

In Newfoundland, Boxing Day also means the start of mumming. That's when people put on a disguise and go from house to house singing, dancing and playing music. When they get to a house, they keep up the fun until the host or hostess can guess who they are. Then they are given food and drink, and when they're done, they move on to the next house. Mumming goes on until January 6.

This column is for readers who have questions but don't know who to ask for answers.

"You Ask-You Answer" is for non-cooking questions. When a reader sends in a question, it will be printed in the paper. Readers who know the answer are asked to respond by mailing the answer, which will then be printed in the paper.

Questions and Answers to this column should be addressed to You Ask-You Answer, Lancaster Farming, P.O. Box 609, Ephrata, PA 17522. Attention: Lou Ann Good.

Or, you may e-mail questions and answers to lgood.eph@lnpnews.com

Please clarify what question you are answering when responding.

Do not send a self-addressed, stamped envelope for a reply. If we receive the answer, we will publish it as soon as possible. Please include your phone number because we sometimes need to contact the person to clarify details. We will not publish your phone number unless you request it.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Every now and then I find something that I have not seen for years. Maybe it is a piece of jewelry that one of my daughters gave me. Or, maybe it is a book that was a gift some 20 years ago. It does jog my memory to find them.

Since I am good at forgetting who gave some gifts, I try to mark them with a name and date. Too many do not get used and are put in the back of a drawer. The useful gifts are the ones that wear out from usage. As folks get older, their lives become cluttered with an accumulation of items.

Therefore, we are told to give things such as stationery, stamps, and food that will be used. Many knickknacks clutter our houses and must be put away when the grandchildren come to visit.

I have a hand blown paperweight from France, a small crystal ball from New Orleans, and a tiny antique music box that intrigues the children and they cannot leave them alone. The music box has a key to wind it and that especially interests them.

Another thing that is the worse for wear or rather from being upset are my dried arrangements. I grow straw flowers and dry other flowers and make small arrangements. But these bouquets break easily when toppled over by little hands.

Yesterday, a Christmas cactus arrived in the mail for me. You see, as a special birthday gift, my children gave me a floral gift. Each month for a year, another plant arrives. So far I have received a gardenia, a lily, a jasmine, a mum, an amaryllis, and a mini pink rose bush. These are things that I will not forget who gave them to me.

Home Buyers' Guide Available

ITHACA, N.Y. — Buying a home is one of the biggest and most important purchases consumers make. Buyers can reach much better decisions if they have accurate information available to them up-front. A publication from the Northeast Regional Agricultural Engineering Service, "Home Buyers' Guide: Financing and Evaluating Prospective Homes," NRAES-50, provides valuable information on each step in the home-buying process.

The 72-page publication covers six major topics: information-gathering, financing, location, floor plans, inspections, and environmental safety. Also included is a home inspection checklist, which neatly summarizes room by room what a buyer should be looking for when inspecting a home. A glossary of home-buying terms is also included, as well as a list of references used in writing the book. The 72-page guide is supplemented by 19 figures and 13 tables.

The guide was written by Phyllis F. Adams, associate professor at the Pennsylvania State University; Marjorie E. Jensen, cooperative extension housing specialist at the University of Rhode Island; and former faculty and staff from the Cornell University College of Human Ecology: Jeanne M. Hogarth, former associate professor; Joseph Laquatra, former associate professor; James A. McCarty, former extension associate and housing specialist; and Linda P. Wagenet, former extension associate and water quality specialist.

Home Buyers' Guide: Financing and Evaluating Prospective Homes, NRAES-50, is available for $8 each plus postage and handling from NRAES, Cooperative Extension, 152 Riley-Robb Hall, Ithaca, NY 14853-5701. Quantity discounts are available. Shipping and handling for single copies is $3.75 within the continental United States. Checks should be made payable to NRAES. All major credit cards are accepted. For information about quantity discounts or for a free publications catalog, contact NRAES by phone at (607) 255-7654, by fax at (607) 254-8770, or by e-mail at nraes@cornell.edu.

FFA to the best of their abilities, and to be an active member. The Elco cafeteria staff provided the evening meal.

The Greenhand quiz contest took place after the meal. The quiz contest is a spelling bee-style contest where first-year FFA members are asked questions about the FFA. Cedar Crest members in the contest were Kyle Seyfert, Samantha Shepler, and Joel Heinaman. Prizes were given out throughout the evening.

Club members eventually split into four groups and participated in sessions with FFA county officers and the state FFA officers. Sessions included information on public speaking, official dress, teamwork, and positive attitudes. Members went home with a new understanding of the FFA.

Bowser's Patent Grows From Christmas Tree Operation

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — Most people think the season for Christmas trees is over, but for growers such as Lew and Jackie Bowser, the big event of the year is the winter meeting and trade show of the Pennsylvania Christmas Tree Growers Association, Jan. 12-13.

Although the Bowsers operate a "Mom and Pop" Christmas tree operation, their main emphasis is designing equipment to make the job easier.

In fact, Lew recently received a patent for what he calls an auger transporter. The five-year process required "lots of paperwork and bucks," for the Bowsers' Christmas Tree Equipment Mfg. (CTE Mfg.).

The Bowsers operate their business on part of the family farm, which had been purchased in 1938. In 1985, Lew put in a few trees to satisfy his yen for what he thought looked like a fun, easy way to make some extra money. He found out that growing Christmas trees requires more than planting the seedlings and forgetting about them until ready to harvest seven years later.

"Customers are knowledgeable and picky. When they say they want a perfect tree, that's what they are looking for, and they won't be satisfied until they find it," Jackie said.

That means trees must be sheared and pruned, something Lew does almost weekly throughout the summer.

In the beginning the Bowsers made the mistake of not completely killing off the alfalfa before planting the seedlings. The alfalfa battle required persistent hoeing by hand.

They also made the mistake of planting Douglas Fir in a low spot that was frequently wet. This variety does not like wet feet and eventually died. The Bowsers replaced them with Colorado Blue Spruce, which does well in low areas.

They now have 6,000 trees, mostly Blue Spruce, Douglas Fir, and Canaan Fir.

The Bowsers said that the Canaan Fir, which is disease-resistant and has long-keeping needles, Lew and Jackie Bowser operate much more than a "Mom and Pop" Christmas tree farm. Lew designs equipment, which they market year-round, and ship from their Lititz location.

dles, is similar to the popular Fraser Fir, but is easier to grow in this area.

At first, the Bowsers did not use any chemicals, but a needle-cast disease hit the Douglas Fir and spraying was necessary to save the plantation.

"Growers are also required to have a pesticide license in order to control fungus and critters that can wipe the farm out in one season or close it down for quarantine," Lew said.

Spraying equipment is a big investment, and sprays need to be applied under strict conditions to be effective. Information on pesticides and insecticides changes constantly, and tree growers must keep up-to-date on the latest information.

From the beginning, Lew designed equipment to make the job easier. He laid out a grid on a field with trees in straight rows with five feet on all sides.

"That's essential to keep weeds at bay and make a neat appearance for customers," Jackie said.

"You must work to get the best trees in the shortest amount of time in order to make a profit," Lew said. "With proper soil conditions, weather, and fertilization, a seven-foot-tree can be grown for harvest in six or seven years."

To keep grass under control, a tractor with a mower deck that slides underneath the trees will work. Another method is to band-spray the tree row with a herbicide so that you only need to mow the center between the rows. Although this method saves labor costs, it increases the cost of herbicides tremendously.

Some growers sell to outlets but the Bowsers decided on a "choose and cut" farm. Although they love the interaction with the customers, the hectic pace requires long hours.

Many customers tag trees in the fall and call to have trees cut down on the day they want it. The Bowsers cut these trees before business opens at 8 a.m.

Because of the long hours,

Jackie said, "Nobody is happier to see Christmas Eve than a Christmas tree grower."

But when Christmas is over, the Bowsers clean out the garage and gear up to ship out orders for the auger transporter that recently received a patent.

Lew explained that it was through need that he developed the auger transporter. Although Christmas trees can be planted easily in the first planting, it is impossible to maneuver big equipment into the space to replant in a choose and cut operation.

Not only is it difficult to transplant trees, but a problem called j-rooting can develop. According to Lew, j-rooting results from not getting roots straight and the dirt packed tightly around the roots during replanting, which leaves air pockets and will eventually kill the seedling.

"It's a well-known fact that augured holes increase the survivability of young plants by helping eliminate J-rooting and air pockets, while creating a water reservoir," Lew said.

But augers already on the market had their drawbacks.

"Using them beats you up, throws you around, and sprains wrists," Lew said. "I thought there has to be an easier way."

Lew grew up fixing things, and building equipment has always been his interest, first on the farm and then in the Army. But it wasn't until Lew was recuperating from cancer treatments during the winter of 1995-1996, that he drew the plans and prepared many prototypes in perfecting the auger transporter.

"I lost lots of sleep, because I'd think up ways to improve it," Lew said of months of perfecting the model.

He is really pleased with the results and said, "I don't think it can be improved. It's a Cadillac — in finish and strength — and it's problem-free."

A side benefit also was that Lew recently passed a five-year cancer free exam.

In addition to developing the auger, the project required writing safety manuals and operating and parts manuals. This is where Jackie's talents came into play. She is a local newspaper reporter and wrote the instructions. The Bowsers also worked closely with patent attorneys.

The steel pieces are manufactured locally and powder-coated before the Bowsers assemble and ship the orders. Because they couldn't find strong enough cartons for shipping the auger, Lew makes the cartons himself.

"You must learn everything you need to know about shipping, freight rates, e-mail, and manufacturing when you're in this business," Jackie said.

Surprising to Lew is that vineyards in addition to Christmas tree growers are buying the augers for planting.

"They work great for big-time growers and the small ones," Lew said. "I knew the need, but I am amazed at the demand."

"Even a woman can operate the auger transporter," Jackie said. "And it's built to last a lifetime."

CTE also manufactures what they call a Kneel-Easy, designed for planters and gardeners to make it easier for getting up and down.

Although 70 years old, Lew is working on several other ideas to make tree-planting easier. "But I may sell plans rather than seek the patent for myself," he said.

Their website address is www.christmas-tree-equipment.com.

The auger transporter patented by Lew Bowser required about five years of perfecting, a myriad of paperwork, and lots of money. But the demand for the auger transporter exceeds the Bowsers' expectation.

Workshop Offers Perspective On Estate Planning

COLUMBUS, Ohio — For many people, estate planning is a confusing subject. The variety of options can cause a lot of murkiness in peoples' minds, said Howard Siegrist, agriculture and natural resources agent at the Licking County office of Ohio State University Extension.

To help people learn more about estate planning issues and the types of probing questions they will need to ask professionals while developing their plans, Ohio State University Extension is sponsoring an Estate Planning Workshop. The workshop will take place on Wednesdays, Jan. 24, Jan. 31 and Feb. 7, 2001, from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Granville Inn in Granville.

"The workshop is intended to elevate the knowledge and understanding of people before they enter into the estate planning process," Siegrist said. "We continue to get questions about various tools to use and processes to follow in estate planning, and with this workshop we're trying to package everything together so people can see and evaluate all the tools that exist."

The first day will cover the legal framework in which estate planning takes place in Ohio and some of the basics, he said. Topics include data people need to know before meeting with an attorney, asset listing, balancing estates for married individuals, federal estate taxes, Ohio estate taxes, wills, gifting and durable power of attorney.

The second and third days will discuss the nuts and bolts of the various types of estate planning tools, Siegrist said. Trusts and life insurance are the topics for the second day. Long-term care insurance and distribution of personal property will be covered on the final day.

People are encouraged to register early, as the workshop will be limited to the first 60 registrants. Registration for the three days is $60 per person or two people for $108. The price includes beverages, lunches and two Ohio State University publications: Who Gets Grandma's Yellow Pie Plate and Estate Family Considerations for Ohio Families. The cost for attending only one day is $25 per person.

Deadline for registration is Jan. 17, 2001. For registration or additional information about the Estate Planning Workshop, people interested should contact the Licking County office of Ohio State University Extension at (740) 349-6900, or toll free at (888) 838-0219, Ext. 6900.

Maryland DHIA Report For November

The November Dairy Herd Improvement information for dairy herds from the DHI processing center in Provo, Utah. The list includes herds from Maryland, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia. The information is listed by herd name, county association, number of cows in the herd and the average production per cow in the herd based on Energy Corrected Milk (ECM). ECM combines milk production and components.

The ECM formula is: (7.2 x lbs. protein) + (12.95 x lbs. fat) + (.327 x lbs. milk). To be included, the herd must have 10 cows averaging 65 pounds or more of ECM per cow, per day. All herds reported are on official DHI or DHIR test. Also listed are the top 10 herds in Maryland for the Brown Swiss, Guernseys, and Jerseys, and the top seven herds for Ayrshires.

USDA Invites State Participation In Market Improvement Program

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The USDA is inviting state departments of agriculture and other appropriate state agencies to submit proposals for matching funds under the Federal-State Marketing Improvement Program (FSMIP).

For fiscal year 2001, USDA has allocated $1.35 million in federal funds for the administration of FSMIP grants. This represents a $150,000 increase over Fiscal Year-2000 funding levels. USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service (AMS) administers this program.

Announcing the availability of funds to the administrative heads of state departments of agriculture, Kathleen A. Merrigan, AMS administrator, advised state agencies that "AMS is particularly interested in proposals that address the issues of small farms, direct marketing, and sustainable agriculture." She also encouraged state applicants to forge partnerships with community-based organizations working in these areas.

FSMIP funds may be requested for a wide range of marketing research or marketing service projects aimed at exploring new market opportunities for agricultural products or improving the efficiency and performance of food marketing systems. Federal funds awarded to any project must be fully matched by nonfederal funds or in-kind resources.

The funds will be allocated on the basis of two rounds of competition. Proposals received by Feb. 9, 2001, will be considered during the first round, and those received by May 11, 2001, will be considered during the second round.

States interested in applying for the funds may submit proposals to FSMIP Staff, USDA Agricultural Marketing Service, Mail Stop 0264, 1400 Independence Ave. SW, Washington, DC 20250-0264, or call (202) 720-2704. Program guidelines, application forms, and other related information are posted on the Internet at <http://www.usda.gov/tmd/fsmip.htm>.

Rare Antique Quilts Stitched By 'White-Topper' Amish Express Striking Simplicity In Bold Colors

GAIL STROCK

BELLEVILLE (Mifflin Co.) —

In 1790, a group of Amish from southeastern Pennsylvania traveled northwestward to settle on the rich limestone soil of the Kishacoquillas Valley in Mifflin County. They farmed and prospered.

But along with prosperity came pressures to change their lifestyle, issues that challenged their ways of farming, style of dress, color, and construction of their buggies and homes, and their use of newer and more advanced tools and farm implements. In 1840, Amish Bishop Yost B. Yoder returned to Pennsylvania from Nebraska to settle a dispute among the Amish, possibly about buggy construction. When efforts to keep the church united failed, members of the most conservative sect continued to maintain their lifestyle by keeping to themselves and have become what is now called the Nebraskans, Old Schoolers, or white-toppers in reference to the color of their buggy.

This sect has most successfully resisted the onslaught of modernization over the past 200 years. They live in only one area of Mifflin County, till the land with horses, let their barns unpainted, and, except for the men's white shirts, dress in the darkest shades of brown, purple, plum, and blue. Understandably, both current and antique quilts made by the Nebraskan Amish feature dark colors. They adhere to minor variations of a nine-patch configuration and show only subtle signs of originality. All of this pieces together to form quilts of striking simplicity.

"As limited as these women were by their church laws, design, and color, they created some of the most expressive artistic and modern-looking quilts," says antique quilt expert Connie Hayes of Belleville.

The Nebraskan women varied the nine-patch design by piecing the squares horizontally or on one of the square's corners. A chain of squares could run horizontally and vertically or diagonally.

Since the women didn't purchase material solely for quilt making, a Nebraskan Amish woman relied on the material scrap box, which contained material that had been stored for a lifetime. She kept her best material for her sons' wedding quilts and made everyday quilts from blue dress material and other available material. When one color ran out while making a quilt, another was substituted, often creating an asymmetrical but visually pleasing color scheme not found in quilts outside the Nebraskan sect.

As a collector of antique quilts and neighbor to many Nebraskan Amish, Connie has, through the years, purchased antique Nebraskan quilts at farm sales and from families. She showed a collection of 23 antique Nebraskan quilts in Denver, Colorado, several years ago. The collection attracted the attention of William Wigton of New Jersey. Wigton offered to buy the collection, which now hangs in the Museum of American Folk Art in New York City. The quilt display has traveled to many U.S. cities and to countries abroad, sharing a history of the Nebraskan Amish through the quilts.

All Nebraskan Amish quilts feature some variation of the nine-patch motif, as shown in this antique Amish quilt owned by antique quilt expert Connie Hayes of Belleville, Mifflin County.

Dark purples and blues readily identify the Nebraskan Amish quilt, as does the nine-patch variation. Very few antique Nebraskan Amish quilts are found today.

"I bought a Nebraskan Amish quilt several years ago at a sale," Connie said, "but I doubt that many older Nebraskan quilts are still in the hands of the Amish."

Putting Your Quilt To Bed

For every quilt, a day usually comes when you want to put it away. Avoid folding, as the weight on the fold can break fibers and leave a dirty line in your quilt. If you need to fold it, make sure to fold it differently each time you put it away. You can pad the folds with scrunched up acid-free paper or well-washed muslin to create a kinder bend.

When storing your quilt in a wooden drawer or cupboard, apply a polyurethane finish over the wood to keep oils from the wood from staining your quilts. Loosely wrap your quilt in muslin or acid free paper rather than plastic wrap, so the quilt can breathe.

High humidity and temperature extremes, such as those that occur in an attic or basement, can wreak havoc on your quilt.

For more information on quilt conservation, contact the American Institute for Conservation, 1717 K St. NW, Suite 200, Washington, D.C. 20006. The AIC is the national membership organization of conservation professionals dedicated to preserving the art and historic artifacts of our cultural heritage. You can write or call AIC for a list of professional conservators in your area who will be able to give you an estimate and help conserve your quilt.

Collectors Intrigued With Rustic Cabin Collectibles

ANNE GILBERT

Proof that "everything old is new again" is the revived interest in rustic furniture and items related to log cabins, camps, and lodges.

Escape from city heat and stress to a cabin in the cool woods or mountains became popular in America in the late 19th century. It began when America's new millionaires discovered the joys of rural simplicity, albeit on a grandiose scale. For their camps and hunting lodges in the Adirondacks they bought hundreds of pieces of hickory chairs with woven bark seats, tables with branch legs, made to order by the Old Hickory Furniture Company in Indiana. For the middle classes, it was only used as garden furniture.

While Old Hickory Furniture is the best known maker of rustic hickory furniture, rustic pieces were made of local woods in other sections of the country. In the South for instance, roots and branches of both mountain laurel bushes and rhododendron were used. Some North Carolina pieces have been found that at first glance look like a form of tramp art decorated with carved and chipped laurel roots, often in elaborate designs.

Most individual craftsmen who made rustic pieces are unknown. An exception, was Ben Davis of Mars Hill, North Carolina, an itinerant preacher, who worked in the 1920s-1930s. His sideboards and cupboards with chip-carved split root and twig decorations are worth hunting for.

Today, small collections of miniature and doll-size rustic furniture are a favorite decorative accessory.

Over the years, the rustic style filtered down into the early 20th century summer cabins of the middle class. After World War II, interest in spending summers in the mountains or at the lake declined. Instead trips to Europe and other far away places became the new escape.

Aluminum furniture replaced rustic porch furniture. Now, once again, not only are people looking with nostalgia at log cabin summers, but at building log cabins and collecting the variety of items that went with them. In fact, often with the help of decorators, they use such unlikely objects as canoes and Adirondack pack baskets to decorate homes and offices.

"Log Spirit," written by Linda Arms White, details with photograph the many types of log homes built, their history, and how they are decorated.

Clues: Since this is a relatively new collecting category, there are still examples waiting to be found. Along with rustic furniture, the use of old canoes as book shelves, became popular several years ago. I first became aware of them at the Metrolina outdoor antiques center outside of Charlotte, North Carolina. Prices for fine birch canoes were a couple of hundred dollars. Today, prices top at more than $1,000. Painted canoe paddles, often with nature scenes finely done, caught my eye. I should have bought one then, for my mountain home. Now they are rarities. When found in outdoor antique shows, the paintings are sometimes newly done and artificially aged.

In a fascinating new book on the subject, "Cabin Collectibles," author Ralph Kylloe, who has decorated rustic homes and commercial buildings, offers ideas not only on what is collectible, but how it can be used to accessorize homes and vacation cabins.

Consider the paddle yet another art form. Like folk art paintings, some are collected for their decorations. Well-known 19th century artist A.F. Tate, known for his primitive style paintings of deer and woods, also painted scenes on paddles and gave them to friends as gifts.

Another other paddle painter, Al Keech is known for his scenic paintings on small, paddles made for tourists who visited the Adirondack region.

According to Kylloe, Keech painted paddles are not signed, but collectors recognize his style.

While there are many examples of painted paddles in museums, early examples can still turn up anywhere.

Another type of paddle decoration

THE ANTIQUE DETECTIVE

Anne Gilbert

Old Presidential China And Repros Popular

Presidential elections always rev up interest in political antiques and collectibles. This year is no exception, attracting a new generation of collectors. Always a winner are examples of Presidential china. Proof was the recent Skinner Auction that included a single plate from the dessert service of U.S. President James K. Polk. It sold over its estimated value of $300-500 for a whopping $3,250. It was part of a 400-piece service and made in France by Eduard Honoré in 1846.

Historically some of the china was made to order, while other patterns were gifts to the various Presidents and their wives. The designs reflected not only Eagles and the Seal of the Republic, but the state flowers of the United States. Over the years, various First Ladies have believed new china was needed for official functions, and have selected patterns pleasing to them. They followed the design fashions and colors of the time.

One of the earliest sets was a gift to Martha Washington, in 1795 from Andreas Everardus Van Braam Houckgeest, the representative of the Dutch East India Company, of Chinese Export Porcelain. It consisted of 45 pieces. The border is a circular chain, each with the names of the 15 states in the Union at the time. There is also a snake that is a Chinese symbol of lasting forever. The gold sunburst has the intertwined letters, M.W.

Mary Todd Lincoln found only a fraction of tableware available to host large State dinners. She had been left with the remains of china from the administration of President Pierce known as the "Red Edge" set. She soon replaced them with plates showing the American eagle, pictured in the 1853 London, Crystal Palace Exhibition. She added her own touch by replacing the blue border with a bright, purple-red, then in fashion...and her personal favorite color. It numbered 190 pieces. After President Lincoln was re-elected, she bought another set of china. Two months later, the President was assassinated and the set wasn't used.

If Sevres porcelain was the china of French kings, then Haviland and company, Limoges, France, can be called the china of American Presidents. Documents have shown that the Lincoln plates were made by Haviland, as were the many sets for succeeding Presidents.

Clues: Over the years, Presidential china has been reproduced. "The Martha Washington" or "States" china was made and sold to the public to tie-in with the 1876 U.S. Centennial and celebrate the signing of the Declaration of Independence. Haviland and Company was commissioned to reproduce it.

In 1969, Haviland and Company began reproducing a series of plates in the original Presidential designs, beginning with the Martha Washington china. The series included the Lincoln and Grant plates, Presidents Andrew Johnson, Franklin Pierce, James A. Garfield, Chester A. Arthur and Rutherford B. Hayes.

The most popular was the Lincoln plates. The edition of the first two issues was 2,500 each addition. They are sometimes stamped "Administration Abraham Lincoln," in red. Others have the mark of J.W. Boteler & Bros. and "Fabrique" par Haviland & Co./Pour J.W. Boteler & Bros. Washington.

Another popular White House china reproduction was the President Grant series. The original design known as the "Flower Set" depicted almost every native American flower documented at the time along with the gold crest of the United States, and made in 1870. The reproduction has a center design of a rose with 21 different color changes. The scalloped border has a tan band with the Seal inset.

When pieces of Presidential china make a rare auction appearance, prices are high...even for an early reproduction. In 1992, a set of President William Henry Harrison, reproduced in 1900, came to auction. The Limoges service, consisting of 36 pieces sold at Goldberg Auction Galleries for $8,140. These days, the price could be almost double.

AMERICA'S MOST POPULAR BALERS

John Deere Round Balers are a farmer's first choice because they deliver tight, high-quality bales that stand up tall and stay firm longer than others. Now, with eight models available, you can match your baling needs even more precisely. All eight retain the features that have made John Deere balers America's most popular line. See us for details, today!

Tired of Cleaning out your Feed Bunks?

When utilizing less-than-perfect feeds stuffs conventional feed wagons allow your cattle to pick and choose what they like leaving undesirable feed in your bunks. A Vertical TMP Cutter/Mixer/Feeder from New Direction Equipment will cut and blend your large or small, round or square bales of hay or silage into a TRUE Total Mixed Ration, which is fluffy, palatable, readily eaten. The NDE Vertical Mixer not only eliminates waste in your bunks but it also eliminates the need for a tub grinder

The New "LS" Are Here!

Featuring
For 2001

NEW CROP PROCESSOR Change Processor In Seconds!

The new Crop Processor can be switched from processing to not processing right from the cab. In seconds, bottom hyd roller moves down allowing the processor cover plate to enter for crops to pass through freely. The processor never has to be removed from the machine. Available on the FX28, 38 and 58.

Top Producers Choose Knight! Congratulations to the La-Foster Farm

Terry and Gerald Foster are very proud of their record-breaking cow, Lucy, and rightly so. She produced 75,260 pounds of milk in her last lactation. They are also pleased with their Knight Reel Auggie® mixers, which, combined with the Foster's excellent management practices, have propelled the La-Foster herd average to the #1 milk production status in North Carolina. There is no comparison to the complete, palatable blend from a Knight Reel Auggie, with its patented reel and auger blending combination. Why else would the La-Foster Farm choose only Knight to feed their record-setting herd?

CLOSED NEW YEAR'S DAY

Dear Customers & Friends:

As we pause at the threshold of a New Year, we cannot help but express our sincere gratitude for the blessings of the past. The relationships which we have been privileged to establish and cultivate over the years are the substance of which our professional lives consist. We take seriously our commitment to excellence in service to the agribusiness community. With this commitment comes a realization that the future promises some interesting challenges and opportunities. With the Grace afforded to us, we endeavor to press forward, using all our resources and energies to meet these challenges. We desire to do our part to help you in your pursuit of a successful and prosperous New Year.

Sincerely,

The Staff of Binkley & Hurst Bros. Inc.

Wishing All of Our Customers a

PROVEN PERFORMER

Scavenger® Spreader

Gehl's Scavenger® Spreader delivers the performance you need year after year, with increased durability and outstanding application control. All thanks to the following features.

- Heavy-duty round core auger with segmented paddles to blend manure. Powered both up and down to ram through heavy loads and break up bridging.
- Special "V" tank design to handle solid, heavy bedded, semi-solid, self-leveling and liquid manure.
- Adjustable auger and expeller speeds spread more types of manure.
- Variflow™ discharge featuring square-tooth expeller paddles for smooth, even spreading at the rate you choose.
- Improved drive system with heavier final drive chains and enhanced idler system.

Start Productive Stay Productive!

For harvesting productivity, you've come to the right place.
Because making you more productive is what Deer Creek is all about.

NO PAYMENTS

NO INTEREST

NO
KIDDING

FREE FORAGE HARVESTER INSPECTION! **

Forage harvesters are high wear pieces of equipment. Seasonal maintenance is a must for peak performance. If you want to limit downtime, have our factory-trained service techs inspect your harvester for free today. We'll do the complete inspection and give you a list of needed repairs. Have us do the work and take advantage of our 180 days no payment no interest plan...or we can provide you with all the parts to do it yourself.

Geographic limitations apply, call your Deer Creek Customer Service rep for details

DON'T FORGET YOUR HEADERS!

The header in front of your Harvester is just as important as the machine itself. We can fully inspect your Hay Pick-up and Row Crop Head.

HAYING EQUIPMENT

Whether you're cutting or baling, you need your equipment operating at top efficiency. And you get that efficiency with original John Deere replacement parts. Many other brands of replacement parts simply don't meet our tough specifications and high-quality standards. Replace worn parts now and be ready in the spring!

FREE INSPECTION **

Have our factory-trained techs perform a complete inspection today! We'll do the work needed or present you with a list of needed parts...either way, take advantage of our 180 days no payment, no interest plan!

Geographic limitations apply, call your Deer Creek Customer Service rep for details.

State-of-the-art 16x16 Synchro CommandTM transmission with 4 speeds under 1 mph

NEW HOLLAND

Building on a good thing

You might recognize the engines, drivelines and axles on the new New Holland TS tractors. They have excellent reputations based on past performance. Thousands of customers have put these components to hard use and benefited from their performance and durability.

So, New Holland wasn't about to change a good thing. They made other improvements to these 70- to 90-PTO-hp tractors instead - like increasing the horsepower, improving the comfort of the cab, relocating the fuel tank for added convenience, adding a top road speed of 25 mph, upgrading the electrical system and adding outlets and modernizing the styling.

Better see these exciting 70- to 90-PTO-hp TS tractors for yourself. And find out how good design can become even better.

Blue Seal Names Senior Dairy Nutritionist

LONDONDERRY, N.H. — Dr. Clay Zimmerman was recently appointed senior dairy nutritionist at Blue Seal Feeds, Inc.

His responsibilities include formulation and technical support for Blue Seal's full line of dairy feeds and supplements. He will be based in the Syracuse, N.Y. area.

Zimmerman has a bachelor's degree in dairy science from Virginia Tech in Blacksburg, Va. and master's and doctorate degrees in ruminant nutrition from North Carolina State University in Raleigh, N.C.

Before joining Blue Seal, he served in a similar role with another major agricultural firm in the Midwest.

Blue Seal Feeds, Inc. is head-

High-Capacity Vermeer Balers 'Love To Eat Hay'

PELLA, Iowa — Thirty years ago, Vermeer started a hay harvesting revolution with the invention of the big round baler. "And, today, with the introduction of a new family of XL Series Balers, we're starting a new one," said Mark Core, Vermeer ag division director.

"A year ago, when we asked several of our serious hay baler customers and dealers what improvements they wanted to see in their next baler, general feedback from various groups described a baler 'simpler to operate and maintain; one that gives [them] more hay per day, high density bales, excellent leaf retention, and, in the end, fewer bales to handle when the baling is done...and, for extra measure, don't significantly change the price,'" said Core.

The manufacturer quickly responded with the recent introduction of the new Vermeer 500XL and 600XL Series balers.

"During this past year, we've fought hard to add more value to our complete baler family and still keep prices in line. The new XL Series is our first, giant step towards this goal, with a big menu of changes and improvements addressing requests of customers and dealers alike.

"These balers love to eat hay," Core said. "They're equipped with a five-bar pickup to handle big windrows; bottom drum design, which promotes fast hay intake; a horizontal bale-starting system for quick starts; and the best Hay Saver Wheels in the field today. In many instances, we've found producers can drive a full gear faster with this Vermeer Baler."

Core cited several XL Baler "extras": a stronger tailgate and tailgate pivot area, larger sprockets on the output drive shafts to improve wearability and chain life (for one of the biggest wear points on round balers), and a reinforced belt tightener assembly on 500XL

A significant change in 500XL Series Balers is maximum bale size with the new larger 65-inch diameter bale. This gives producers 17 percent more bale capacity than the old five-foot diameter bale size for basically the same price.

Series Balers. Rust-resistant yellow zinc plating, ground-level pounding test safety-duty chain, and high flotation tires (31.5 x 13.5-15, 6-ply) are also standard on XL models.

Another improvement is a cut-out clutch which totally eliminates hot or burnt out discs in accidental overfill and overload situations. (This is a problem with slip clutch protection, especially if you're overpowered, or trying to squeeze the last few feet of a windrow into an over-filled baler.)

Wide belts provide maximum belt-to-bale contact. Rubber-mounted pickup tines not only improve pickup action, but also lower replacement costs. Drop 'n Go Bale Ejection System, now standard on all XL models, eliminates the need to disengage and re-engage the PTO when dropping a bale.

A significant change in 500XL Series Balers is maximum bale size with the new larger 65-inch diameter bale. This gives producers 17 percent more bale capacity than the old five-foot diameter bale size for basically the same price. Plus it reduces field time, resulting in fewer bales to move and handle.

MidAtlantic Farm Credit Receives Distinguished Service Award

WESTMINSTER, Md. — MidAtlantic Farm Credit, the region's largest agricultural lender, recently received the Distinguished Service to Agriculture Award from the Maryland Farm Bureau.

The award was announced recently at the annual Maryland Farm Bureau banquet in Ocean City, Md.

In presenting the award, Maryland Farm Bureau president Steve Weber cited the support of MidAtlantic, and the former Maryland Farm Credit associations, for programs such as LEAD Maryland (a two-year leadership program), studies of the effect of zoning on ag land values, and general support of broad based ag initiatives.

Chairman of the board, Walter Hopkins of Lewes, Del., accepted the award on behalf of MidAtlantic Farm Credit.

"It's an honor to be recognized by an organization as proactive and well-respected as Maryland Farm Bureau. I'd like to thank the MidAtlantic staff and board of directors for their efforts in working with Farm Bureau over the years. Both of our organizations are committed to the future of agriculture in the state, and we will continue to work together to make farming a stable and viable industry in the future," said Hopkins.

"MidAtlantic's recent consolidation further strengthened our position in the Maryland area, allowing us to combine support staff for both central Maryland and the Eastern shore. As a result, we look forward to increased opportunities to work with Maryland Farm Bureau and their membership in the future."

Chisel Plow Performance Enhancements Focused On Customer

RACINE, Wis. — Improved field finish, superior residue distribution, and long-lasting durability are features that farmers can count on with the new Case IH 5850 chisel plow.

"With new shank enhancements and harrow options on the 5850, we are building on our established reputation for superior soil penetration, consistent leveling, and ease of operation," said Keith Whitaker, Case IH product and marketing manager, tillage. "We've used input from farmers to focus these latest performance improvements."

Originally introduced on the 5800 chisel plow, the edge-on shank design has been redesigned to provide even better performance and durability. The entry angle of the new shank is reduced by 50 percent and the wing angle of the sweep by 33 percent compared to traditional shank and sweep designs.

The reduced entry angle decreases the horsepower required per sweep. Less soil is thrown to the surface and more crop residue remains exposed, helping prevent erosion.

"We've gone to great lengths to improve the reliability and durability of this new shank," said Whitaker. "We've made

New shank assemblies and harrow options help the new Case IH 5850 chisel plow provide superior performance and long-term durability, as well as improvements to field finish and residue distribution. In addition, walking beam axles and an automatic self-leveling hitch ensure precise depth control.

improvements from top to bottom, from a reinforced head bracket and mounting clamp to recessing the lower sweep-mounting hole on the shank to help prevent bolt and nut wear."

Tough residue destruction aren't a problem with the 22-inch heavy-duty coil tine harrows featured on the new 5850 chisel plow. The three-bar harrows have an adjustable down pressure spring to provide extra pressure where needed to obtain the right surface condition and field finish. The tine angle also is easily adjustable to provide uniform residue flow.

The Case IH tradition of excellent depth control continues with the 5850 chisel plow. Walking beam axles on all mainframes provide better flotation over uneven terrain. The same axles are used on the wing frames of 25- to 53-foot machines to provide precise depth control across the entire machine width.

An automatic self-leveling hitch maintains a uniform depth even when the working depth of the machine is changed. This equipment, standard on all 5850 chisel plows, combines mechanical and hydraulic linkages to keep the front and rear shanks of the machine level as it moves up and down.

"Customers also may take advantage of the optional floating hitches offered on the 5850," Whitaker said. "Close-coupled front caster wheels on the floating hitch work with the mainframe walking beam wheels to provide a virtual machine suspension, allowing the chisel plow to hug the ground. Instead of using a conventional rigid hitch that often flexes and scrapes uneven ground, causing erratic depths, the floating hitch is able to move with the terrain."

Scholarship Program Targets Future Agriculture Professionals

ST. LOUIS, Mo. and PARK RIDGE, Ill. — Monsanto Company and the American Farm Bureau Foundation for Agriculture announced the details behind the third annual Commitment to Agriculture Scholarship Program.

Open to high school seniors from all 50 states, the competitive scholarship program is offered by Monsanto in association with the American Farm Bureau Foundation for Agriculture.

To be eligible, the students must come from farm families and plan to pursue careers in agriculture. One-time awards of $1,500 will be made to 100 high school seniors chosen by an impartial selection committee of agricultural educators and industry leaders.

Applicants will be evaluated on their high school records, standardized test results, extracurricular activities and personal essays submitted as a part of the application process. Applications will be available in mid-December from Monsanto dealers, county Farm Bureau offices, and on the following Websites: <http://www.farmsource.com> or <http://www.agfoundation.org>.

I cordially invite you to take part in the 2001 Pennsylvania Farm Show, Jan. 6-11.

The Farm Show is the nation's leading indoor agricultural showcase. It proudly recognizes the dedication of Pennsylvania's 60,000 farm families, and offers visitors the chance to learn more about the ever-changing face of agriculture.

The Farm Show exhibits offer something for everyone. Whether you are interested in livestock, arts and crafts, modern farm machinery—or if you just want to see the latest in agricultural technology—the Pennsylvania Farm Show has it all.

Put simply, Pennsylvania Agriculture feeds the world. To further ensure Pennsylvania's continued global agricultural leadership, Governor Tom Ridge and I announced the largest-ever state investment in agriculture—nearly $90 million—that will allow the state's farm families and agribusiness to compete and thrive in the New Economy of the 21st Century. This commitment to the future of Pennsylvania agriculture includes $66 million to expand and refurbish the Farm Show Complex, and nearly $24 million for a new Livestock Evaluation Facility and an upgraded Veterinary training facility.

I thank you for your continued support of Pennsylvania Agriculture. I'll see you at the Farm Show!

Sam Hayes
Secretary of Agriculture

Parking is available on the 60-acre site for $5 per vehicle. Overflow parking is offered at the Harrisburg Area Community College (HACC) with shuttle bus service to the Main Exhibit Building. A small fee is charged for this service. Handicapped parking and access areas have been expanded and can now be found along the South Entrance, the North Entrance and in front of the Large Arena.

Security during Farm Show Week is provided by the Pennsylvania State Police and Farm Show Security.

Lost children and parents should report to the State Police Command Center along the north wall of the Main Building. Lost and Found items are kept in the Farm Show Security Office, located in the corridor between the Main and North Buildings.

The famous commodity food booths are located in the East Building. Snack bars are located around the facility. And, a cafeteria is located on the second floor of the Main Building offering complete meals and ala carte items.

The Emergency Medical Service with doctors, nurses and ambulance attendants is located on the Lower Concourse of the Large Arena.

Restrooms are located throughout the Farm Show Complex and most of them have diaper changing tables. Nursing mothers can find a quiet spot in the EMS room by the Large Arena.

Coat checks are located in the South Lobby and Large Arena. The fee is 50 cents per item.

Public pay telephones are available throughout the Farm Show Complex.

The Director's Office and Press Room are located on the second floor over the Main Lobby. The Radio Room is off the Lower Concourse of the Large Arena.

Food Court - Eleven Pennsylvania commodity associations offer their specialties for sale in the orange East Building. Featuring the tastes of Pennsylvania's finest agricultural products, the famous Farm Show Food Court is one place you'll want to visit again and again.

Food Pantry - The Food Pantry in the West Lobby features hundreds of items produced and processed in Pennsylvania. Cooking demonstrations are presented several times each day, as culinary students incorporate many of the products on display into their favorite recipes. 4-H Exhibits - Food and nutrition, clothing and textiles, crafts, child care, animal science and entomology, photography, woodworking, gardening and wildlife are some of the project categories that 4-H club members can submit for judging in the Family Living department.

Horticulture Center - You are sure to find inspiration for your own landscaping projects when you see what our FFA members have done with their landscape exhibits located throughout the second floor of the Northeast Building, Family Living and Agricultural Learning Center.

Hours - Farm Show hours are now 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. every day except Thursday, when the show closes at 4 p.m. The blue Main Building with commercial exhibits opens one hour later and closes one hour earlier than the rest of the Farm Show Complex.

Milking Parlor - Hundreds of cows are milked twice a day in a modern milking parlor in the red North Building. Unique among dairy shows, this facility is approved by state milk sanitarians for the production and sale of fluid milk. The milk is inspected, cooled, and pumped onto bulk tanks for sale through normal market channels, with proceeds going back to the Farm Show exhibitors.

Pennsylvania Food Market - The Food Market features a variety of Pennsylvania companies promoting their own snack foods, candy, spices, processed meats, condiments and beverages through sales and sampling. The Food market has moved to a new location in the Southwest Corner of the Main Exhibition area. This popular exhibit was previously located in the Maclay Street Lobby.

Rodeo - Youth champions from around the state will compete in two separate rodeos on Saturday. Sanctioned by the Pennsylvania High School Rodeo Association, classes are posted for team roping, saddle and bareback riding, bull riding, steer wrestling, calf roping, breakaway roping, goat tying, pole bending and barrel racing.

School Activities - Vo-ag students from Pennsylvania high schools compete for a slice of the Farm Show prize money with a variety of demonstrations and exhibits. Eighteen educational window exhibits can be found on the lower concourse of the Large Arena, while interesting landscape exhibits and horticultural exhibits can be found in the Family Living and Agricultural Learning Center. Both 4-H and FFA student demonstrations during the week on the stages of the Family Living and Agricultural Learning Center.

Shaver's Creek Environmental Center - You can see birds of prey, turtles, snakes, spiders, toads, honeybees, skulls and skins in this educational display geared toward children. This interactive exhibit is open all week in the Family Living and Agricultural Learning Center.

Supreme Champions - Selections of the prestigious 2001 Pennsylvania Farm Show Supreme Champions will be made for draft horses, swine, dairy cattle, beef cattle, sheep wool breeds and meat breeds after the last breed is judged in each department.

Admission is FREE for all events during Farm Show Week.

The Farm Show Complex is located along Cameron and Maclay Streets in Harrisburg, just off Exit 23 of Interstate 81. Message boards and Keystone signs will direct Farm Show visitors onto alternate routes to alleviate traffic congestion on I-81. Other arteries include Route 39, Route 22/322, Route 230 and Elmerton Avenue.

Animals on Display - over 5,000 head of sheep, swine, horses, cattle, goats, and rabbits are expected for competition. Always in the limelight, our livestock shows and sales attract exhibitors and visitors from all corners of the commonwealth.

Butter Sculpture - The Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program will sponsor another life-size butter sculpture. This will be located in the East Lobby.

Commercial Exhibitors - You will see this year's newest innovation in farm equipment, services, and products, and learn more about them from representatives of over 325 companies with exhibits around the complex.

Cooking Demonstrations are an ongoing feature in the Food Pantry throughout the week.

Educational Exhibits - Government agencies, universities, and agricultural organizations always offer Farm Show visitors valuable information on their services and activities. Visitors can talk with representatives of these groups and get first-hand information, on a multitude of subjects.

Family Living and Agricultural Learning Center - One acre of family living, horticultural, environmental and 4-H and FFA exhibits are located in the Family Living and Agricultural Center. These interesting presentations are featured on stage on the second floor of the Northeast Building.

Promoter Expects Record Number Of Exhibitors At Show

YORK (York Co.) — The Keystone Farm Show, at the York Fairgrounds Jan. 9-11, is expected to host a record crowd.

The annual show, now in its fourth year, is billed as "The Farm Show for farmers." More than 325 exhibitors are expected to attend.

The need for additional exhibitor space has prompted Trade Show Manager Ken Maring to increase the number of exhibition buildings to six. "The first year, our 85 exhibitors filled both wings of Memorial Hall," said Maring. "This year, we need six buildings to have a place for everyone."

In addition to the indoor exhibits, the annual Skid Steer Rodeo will be conducted in an outdoor arena on Wednesday, Jan. 10, from 1 p.m.-3 p.m. Farmers find this competition both challenging and fun, and it offers them an opportunity to "test drive" new skid steer loaders under actual conditions. As always, prizes will be awarded to the top competitors.

Bruce Button, Lee Publications general manager, attributes the show's success to its attendees. "Our show brings the farmers and the exhibitors together in an environment that encourages them to do business," said Button. "Our theory behind the show is to bring a high quality audience to meet with our show's exhibitors in a three-day period. Our farmers and exhibitors are busy people. We try to bring them what they want and expect out of a Farm Show."

York Fairgrounds Site Of Keystone Farm Trade Show

YORK (York Co.) — The Keystone Farm Show, set for the York Fairgrounds, Jan. 9-11, has become the fastest growing trade show for farmers and agribusiness throughout the Mid-Atlantic states.

Fred Lee, president of Lee Publications, Inc., marvels at the show's success.

"The Keystone Farm Show has proven to be the fastest growing project this company has ever launched. I guess we were in the right place at the right time."

Tom Mahoney, corporate sales manager, reiterates Lee's amazement. "In 1998, we had 85 exhibits. Back then, Memorial Hall was large enough to house them all. Today, we need six buildings for our expected 325 exhibits. There are several outdoor displays as well."

Mahoney explains that show organizers recognized the need for a farm trade show in Pennsylvania that offered exhibitors and farmers the opportunity to come together "to do business" in a few days instead of a week or more.

"The Keystone Farm Show does exactly that," said Mahoney.

As a way to make show attendance easier for visitors, Mahoney said that the exhibit buildings will be clearly designated with color-coded signs. "We want the show visitors to be able to see as many exhibits as possible while they are at the Keystone Farm Show," said Mahoney. "By numbering the buildings with signs that are coordinated with the show program, farmers will be able to find the vendors that they want to see more easily."

Exhibitors are excited about the Keystone Farm Show as well. Janet Button, assistant to Trade Show Manager Ken Marino said, "We had over 100 vendors sign contracts for the 2001 show while they were here at the show last year. They had such success at the 2000 Keystone Show that they wanted to make sure that they would have an exhibit at the 2001 show." She noted that in the trade show promotion industry, advanced contract reservations at this pace is unprecedented.

The show is open Tuesday and Wednesday, Jan. 9-10, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Thursday, Jan. 11, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Admission tickets are available at local participating farm dealers. For additional information about the Keystone Farm Show, contact Ken Maring at (800) 218-5586.

Keystone Farm Show To Feature Skid Steer Rodeo

YORK (York Co.) — The Keystone Farm Show, here at the York Fair Grounds Jan. 9-11, is once again featuring its "trademarked event," the popular Country Folks' Championship Skid Steer Rodeo.

Rodeo organizer and Trade Show Manager Ken Maring believes that this year's event will be the best one yet.

"Every year the competition gets better," said Maring. "Competitors come to this event to win. The prizes for the top finishers are always items that farmers can use."

The Skid Steer Rodeo will be in the outdoor arena on Wednesday, Jan. 10, from 1 p.m.-3 p.m. Farmers find this competition both challenging and fun, and it offers them an opportunity to "test drive" new skid steer loaders under actual working conditions.

There is no fee to participate, but contestants must be 18 years of age. Sign-up to compete in the rodeo begins at 12:30 p.m. at the competition area.

"Last year we had almost 50 competitors," said Maring. "This event has become the highlight of the Keystone Farm Show."

Adding that the Pennsylvania competitors are some of the most skilled throughout the Mid-Atlantic region, Maring is impressed. "We hold these rodeos throughout the East and, without a doubt, the Skid Steer Rodeo at the Keystone Farm Show brings in some of the most skilled operators that we see."

Deer Farmer Seminar Jan. 27

ITHACA, N.Y. — The Third New York State Farmed Deer Seminar will be Jan. 27 at the New York State College of Veterinary Medicine.

This conference is co-sponsored by the North American Deer Farmers Association (NADEFA), NADEFA's New York Branch, New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets, and the Cornell Diagnostic Lab.

Speakers and topics include Barbara Fox, executive director for NADEFA, welcoming remarks; David Realman, New York DEC, DEC's requirements for farming deer in New York; Dr. John Huntley, director of New York State agriculture and markets, division of animal industry, regulations for the deer industry; Dr. Larry Varner, Purina Mills nutritionist, fawn nutrition and bottle feeding; Dr. Susan Stehman, senior extension veterinarian at the Diagnostic Lab at Cornell University, liver flukes and wasting diseases; Dr. Robert Hillman, Cornell University, poisonous plants; Daryl Emmeck, NRCS grazing land management specialist, grazing deer; and Bob Mothersbaugh, Penn State deer research and breeding facility, winterizing the deer herd and the deer nutritional calendar.

A round table question and answer period will be held at the end of the conference. There will be ample opportunity to network. Deer industry vendors will be exhibiting their products and services.

Preregistration is $40 or $50 at the door. Lunch, breaks, and proceedings are included in the registration fee. Registration brochures are available from NADEFA.

For more information, contact the North American Deer Farmers Association at (301) 459-7708, fax (301) 459-7864, or e-mail info@nadefa.org. Written requests can be sent to 9301 Annapolis Road #206 Lanham, MD 20706.

BMPs In Planning Feb. 28

YORK (York Co.) — Want to learn more about best management practices (BMPs) that may need to be included in nutrient plans that you are writing? Do you need Continuing Ed credits?

Even if you are not "final" certified, you are welcome to attend "The Importance of BMPs in Nutrient Management Planning" Feb. 28 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Pleasant Acres Complex in York, hosted by the York and Adams County conservation districts.

Topics to be covered include using the Pennsylvania Technical Guide when planning BMPs, identifying and correcting overused pastures, identifying and correcting stream corridor concerns, development of ag waste management systems (identifying and correcting problems), how conservation planning should complement nutrient management planning, plan writing common mistakes, third year revision issues, and current nutrient planning issues.

As demand for voluntary Act 6 nutrient plans on dairy and beef operations with large crop acres increases, nutrient management specialists are dealing with many situations that require adoption of BMPs to remediate critical areas. Those problems include nutrient runoff concerns from barnlot areas and storm water runoff problems from fields and pastures.

The main purpose of this session is to build and strengthen your knowledge on how to identify nonpoint sources such as field erosion, pastures, and barnlots and propose appropriate solutions. You will learn the options available to reduce nutrient losses from these areas and become more familiar with resources available to get this important work done. Increased knowledge of conservation planning will enrich your capacity to create nutrient plans that complement existing conservation plans.

The meeting offers 4.5 CECs. Lunch will be on your own. For more information, contact Shelly Dehoff, York County Conservation District, at (717) 755-2966, ext. 107 or Mark Goodson, Penn State Cooperative Extension, at (717) 840-7408.

USDA's Workforce Increasingly Diverse

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The USDA's workforce has grown more diverse during the Clinton-Gore Administration, Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman said recently.

Women now occupy more than 42 percent of USDA's permanent positions, and 21 percent of USDA's employees are minorities, the highest percentage in history.

USDA's increasingly diverse workforce is particularly noteworthy since it comes during a period of significant downsizing. USDA's total permanent workforce has decreased from 98,908 in fiscal year 1993 to 85,920 in fiscal year 2000, a reduction of nearly 14 percent.

"Abraham Lincoln called USDA 'the people's department,' and our workforce now better reflects all the people that we serve," said Glickman. "While our work is not done, we have made great progress in turning around the department's civil rights record and ensuring that all our employees and customers are treated fairly, with dignity and respect."

From 1993 to 2000, African American permanent employment at USDA increased from 9.4 to 10.8 percent. Hispanic representation increased from 4.1 percent to 5.4 percent. Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders grew from 1.7 to 2.3 percent of USDA's permanent workforce. Native American representation increased from 2.4 to 2.5 percent. There was also an increase in women among USDA's permanent workforce — from 41.1 to 42.3 percent.

The hiring of 2,582 women and minorities out of 4074 total permanent hires in fiscal year 2000 indicates continued growth in diversity among the USDA workforce. Women comprised 52.6 percent of new permanent hires, African Americans 16.2 percent, Hispanics 6.4 percent, Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders 2.3 percent, and Native Americans/Alaskan Na-

Glickman said USDA has been particularly successful in increasing the representation of minorities and women in senior-level positions (GS-14 and above). Since 1993, the number of non-white USDA employees in these positions increased by 56 percent (580 to 904), while the number of women also increased by 56 percent (907 to 1415).

Glickman said targeted outreach and other employment initiatives have helped significantly increase minority hiring. He also announced that he has established five new employee advisory councils and an overall diversity council to advise him on issues affecting African Americans, Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders, Native Americans, women, and gay and lesbian USDA employees. The new councils join those already established for Hispanics and people with disabilities.

Landowners Desire Know-How To Design Streamside Forests

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — As part of a multistate effort to protect water quality, Pennsylvania Governor Tom Ridge has committed to planting 900 miles of "riparian forest" in Pennsylvania by the year 2010.

Landowners are willing to create riparian areas on their properties, as long as they have a say in the design, said a researcher in Penn State's School of Forest Resources.

"Many landowners are concerned that — if they accept government cost-share programs and other incentives to plant buffers — someone will come onto their land and tell them what to do," said James Finley, associate professor of forest resources. "They feel responsible for taking care of streams, but they want to be able to choose a design that suits their needs."

Riparian forests are strips of forest along streams that serve as natural filters. Among other benefits, they prevent sediments, fertilizers, and other pollutants from farms and lawns from washing into streams. The trees also help to shade the water, keeping it cool and oxygenated for trout and other aquatic life.

Finley and doctoral student Dan Dutcher surveyed more than 800 streamside landowners — including farmers, forest landowners, and urban dwellers — to learn their motivations, interest, and issues relating to establishing or maintaining riparian forests.

The landowners were concerned about aesthetics foremost. They also were concerned that falling branches might damage farm equipment and that wooded areas might attract snakes.

"Some people didn't even realize they had a stream on their property," Finley said. "First-order streams, high in the watershed, often just look like trickles coming out of the ground."

The researchers also learned that many landowners don't understand what stream improvement means and desire some education. Subsequently, graduate student Kari Umphrey held focus groups with landowners in the Standing Stone and Shaver's Creek watersheds in Huntingdon County to learn more about their needs. She then drafted a curriculum that teaches people about riparian forests.

Finley plans to test the curriculum, then offer it through Penn State Cooperative Extension, conservation districts, and the Pennsylvania Bureau of Forestry.

Vegetable Production Workshops Set

ITHACA, N.Y. — Find out how to manage soil, weeds, insects, and disease at the organic vegetable production all-day workshops Feb. 27, March 6, and March 13 at Cornell University's New York State Agricultural Experiment Station in Geneva, N.Y.

The first workshop, Feb. 27, will focus on soil and nutrient management, with specific attention to tillage and soil quality, testing and interpretation, soil life, and fertility management.

The March 6 workshop will focus on weed management, with specific attention to weed biology, cultivation tools and strategies, and ecological approaches to weed control.

The March 13 workshop will examine insect and disease management, with specific attention to crop resistance, beneficial microorganisms, and managing habitats to maintain beneficial insects.

Workshops will be taught by Cornell researchers, Cornell Cooperative extension field staff, and organic growers.

The workshops are sponsored by Cornell's New York State Integrated Pest Management program, the Northeast Sustainable Agriculture Research and Education program, the Northeast Organic Farm Association — New York, and New York Certified Organic, Inc.

Before Feb. 16, registration is $15 per day per person. Registrations for all three days that are postmarked by Feb. 16 are $40. After that date registration will be $20 per day, and there will be no discount for registering all three days.

For more information and registration, call Cornell's Integrated Pest Management Program at (800) 635-8356.

From Susquehanna Valley Dairy we want to thank all of our customers for making 2000 another good year for us. We also wish all of you a very prosperous 2001, prosperous meaning, good health, adequate finances, happy families, and cows giving lots of milk.

FOR SALE

- 1) 45 cows, all registered, this dairyman sold his herd 3 yrs. ago, then started again with his heifers, now the herd is mostly first and second calf.
- 2) 45 cows, all registered, not on D.H.I.A. but ships about 24,000 lb. per cow.
- 3) 72 cow, all A.I. herd, one half registered, young herd. 68 lb. daily average now.
- 4) 10 registered heifers from one overstocked herd, due in the next 60 days.
- 5) 30 heifers from one farm, due in the next 60 days.
- 6) Pick 50 Registered JERSEYS from one herd of 100 cows. Shipping 45 lbs. per day with lots of cows due in Feb., March, April.
- 7) Top pedigreed bull with Dam, Granddam, great Granddam, best records all over 40,000 milk and EX & VG on type.

SEVERAL INTERESTING FACTS

- 1) A young dairyman in Strasburg bought a herd in Conn. 3 yrs. ago, he only bought one replacement since.
- 2) Dairyman in Kinzers who bought a herd in New York, I stopped in to see him this summer, counted the cows, checked the milk slips in the milk house, scratched my head, went back and counted the cows again, he was averaging over 85 lb. per day 2X.
- 3) Moved a herd from Vermont to Quarryville in July. This year in Vermont the herd was averaging 60 lb., 2 months later in the heat of summer, they were averaging 78 lb.
- 4) Or how about buying a 14 yr. old dry cow with a herd. Bringing her home, she calves out, milks over 100 lb. and breeds right back.

Happy Holidays!!

REGISTERED ANGUS AND CROSSBRED BRED HEIFERS

The Department of Dairy and Animal Science at Penn State University is offering 10 registered Angus and 5 Simmental/Angus crossbred bred heifers for sale. These heifers are the result of a rigorous breeding program with selection for growth, maternal, and carcass traits of economic value to cattlemen. Several of these heifers were bred to calve in January and February, and the remainder will calve before May 1, 2001. Service sires include SAF Fame and high performance Penn State bulls. The Angus heifers are priced at $1000 each and the crossbreds are priced at $850 each with discounts available for groups of 5 or more heifers.

FEED SUPPLEMENT BLOCKS FOR THE LIVESTOCK INDUSTRY

- High Natural Protein • No Urea • Fat Enhanced
- Balanced Supplementation • Safe For All Livestock Classes

Sweetcake Advantages

- Aids in making the best use of your available forage
- Promotes a more even herd consumption, with 24-hour availability to all cattle
- Reduces labor to save you money and give you more time to make important management decisions
- Supplies much-needed vitamins and minerals that forage lacks to help your cattle perform to their genetic potential
- Supplies fat in most formulations to enhance energy intake

For Dairy

- Replacement heifers that grow out soundly and economically
- Body condition on dry cows so they can return to lactation, producing at the maximum potential
- Healthier herds, with essential trace minerals that help prevent metritis, retained placenta and other health problems

- Prompt re-breeding, thanks to essential nutrients

For Beef

- Stronger, healthier calves at birth
- Heavier Calves at weaning
- Cows that cycle better for improved conception rates

- Cows that milk better to raise a better calf

AttentionDairy, Swine & Poultry Producers!*New Products Now Available...

With the addition of our new soybean processing facility, we now offer these products to meet your nutritional needs. Manufacturing these products ourselves allows us to utilize locally grown soybeans and support our local agricultural community!

GOLDEN PRO 46 XP

This natural, mechanically extruded and expelled soybean product is experiencing great acceptance with local dairymen. A coarse golden colored meal with a 6% fat content, Golden Pro 46 XP is extremely palatable. Golden Pro 46 XP is a natural way to bring the value of high by-pass protein into diets that require a lower fat level.

GOLDEN MEAL 40

An 18 percent fat content along with a 40 percent crude protein makes this mechanically extruded meal product a valuable component in a variety of rations. Full fat content gives you a high level of digestible energy, while high temperature extruding ruptures the oil cells for better nutritional absorptions.

CRUDE SOYBEAN OIL

A product of Keystone's expelling process, this oil can be used in a wide variety of on farm applications. A natural alternative to animal fats, this oil provides needed energy in various rations.

To make these products available, and to help you utilize your home raised soybeans
Keystone Mills announces its

Soybean Exchange Program

As manufacturers and distributors of Golden Pro 46 XP and Golden Meal 40, we are anxious for you to try our products. We are offering a soybean exchange program featuring these quality nutritional products.
